Chief Justice Hughes To Retire from Supreme Court

Roosevelt Accepts His Request To Be Relieved Of Duties on July First

President Wires He Is "Deeply Distressed"; Jackson Seems Likely To Be Successor

WILL RETIRE JULY 1

Chief Justice Hughes

HYDE PARK, N. Y., June 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt accepted tonight the request of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes that he be permitted to retire from the Supreme Court on July 1.

The chief justice, in a letter made public by the temporary White House, informed the president that "consideration of health and age makes it necessary that I should be relieved of the duties which I have been discharging with increasing difficulty."

The president telegraphed Justice Hughes that he was "deeply distressed" by the letter and that it was his "every inclination" to beg him to remain. But he said "deep concern for your health and strength must be paramount."

Hughes' retirement created a second vacancy on the Supreme Court bench unless that caused by the retirement of Associate Justice James C. McReynolds is filled before July 1.

It was predicted in Washington that Attorney General Robert H. Jackson would succeed Justice Hughes.

The chief justice this afternoon refused to comment on reports that he would retire in the near future saying that any information on the subject "would be appropriately announced in due season."

It was learned, however, that Mrs. Hughes for some time has been urging the chief justice to lay aside active work and devote his remaining days to rest and travel.

Aviator Killed in Crash at Beckley

BECKLEY, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—A two-place training plane, swerving suddenly after rising 100 feet from the takeoff, crashed at the Beckley airport today, killing the pilot, 39-year-old Rimard Thornton of Bluefield.

Thornton, who had landed here after bad weather halted a projected flight from Princeton airport to Logan, was killed instantly and the plane badly damaged.

The small yellow ship was owned by Philip Chaffin, Princeton aviator. Thornton was flying alone. When weather caused cancellation of the Logan trip, Thornton landed there to refuel. It was assumed he intended to return to Princeton, ten miles from Bluefield, although he did not announce his intentions.

Witnesses said the plane rose about 100 feet, turned suddenly to the left and dove into the muddy ground. It was the first fatal airplane accident since establishment of the Beckley airport.

Thornton was a son of James Thornton of Bluefield and was employed in a department store of which his father is a partner.

Hitler and Mussolini Hold Long Conference; Keep Plans Secret

BERLIN, Tuesday, June 3 (AP)—The world soon will know what Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini discussed yesterday at Brenner Pass on the day the battle for Crete was concluded victoriously, informed German circles said today.

Their conversations will be "clarifying and decisive," these sources said.

By LYNN HEINZERLING

BERLIN, June 2. (AP)—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini discussed the "political situation" at Brenner Pass today only a few hours after the German high command had put its seal on an announcement of the successful conclusion of the bitterly fought battle for Crete.

Suspect Sabotage In Crash of Big British Bomber

Four Fliers Killed in Mysterious Accident at San Diego

SAN DIEGO, Calif., June 2 (AP)—A four-motored British Liberator bomber crashed into San Diego bay today apparently carrying four fliers to death.

Hints of sabotage received the attention of the Federal Bureau of Investigation after a part of the craft had been recovered.

The accident occurred when the controls of the four-motored camouflaged craft failed to function properly immediately after the take-off from Lindbergh field. The twenty-five-ton plane rose sharply, its motors straining as it climbed at a steep angle, and then side-slipped, crashing on its left wing.

Tampering Suspected
The sabotage possibility evidently was based on the contention of a company spokesman that the bomber controls could not jam unless they had been tampered with.

A spokesman for the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, which has $500,000,000 in orders from Great Britain and the U. S. navy and army for the land and seaplane bombers, earlier had stated there were evidences of sabotage.

Harold Nathan, FBI chief investigator, said the bureau always makes preliminary inquiries into activities of this kind.

One of the five crew members was injured seriously. One body was recovered. The other three were missing.

Listed by the company as evidently dead were:

William Wheatley, 38, Chester, N. Y., chief test pilot for Consolidated; Alan T. Austin, 28, Kansas (Continued on Page 8, Col. 1)

Conscription of Labor Urged by Bishop Leonard

Would Draft Men Who Strike While Working on Defense Programs

WESTMINSTER, Md., June 2.—(AP)—Conscription of labor to prevent strikes on defense projects was urged today by Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, who asserted "it is as unpatriotic for a man to refuse to work as it is for young man to refuse to go into the service of his country."

"If we are going to conscript our boys into the army, I would conscript labor so that they may not strike during our defense work," the Bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist church told 134 graduates of Western Maryland College at commencement exercises.

Awarded Honorary Degree
Bishop Leonard was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of laws. He was presented by Bishop James H. Straughn of Pittsburgh.

The honorary degree of doctor of science was conferred upon Dr. Charles Reid Edwards of Baltimore, a member of the staff of the University of Maryland Medical School. He was presented by Dr. W. W. Chase of George Washington University.

Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland, awarded the honorary degrees and presented diplomas to the graduates.

Sixteen members of the ROTC were awarded commissions as second lieutenants in the army reserves by Col. Percy L. Sadler, U. S. army, head of the department of military science and tactics.

Students prizes awarded were:

Defeat Dictators, O'Connor Urges in Salisbury Speech

Governor Addresses Graduates of State Teachers College

SALISBURY, Md., June 2 (AP)—Governor O'Connor today called upon the thirty-three graduates of Salisbury State Teachers College to help defeat the "all-risking and all-grasping ambition of the dictators" by practicing and promoting the "democratic heritage" of America.

"You graduates of 1941 go forth to face the greatest crisis in the history of mankind," the governor said at commencement exercises.

The next ten years will determine not alone the fate of our country and all we hold dear—but the fate of civilization itself.

But, he said, he had the "utmost faith in the reserve power and ability of the teaching profession to measure up to its share in the defense effort," and was sure that eventually "God will rule in the hearts of men and the dictators will be defeated."

Teachers Bear Burden
"Probably never before in the history of our country has it been so important to have the teaching profession urged to assume leadership in the nation-wide effort to make abundantly clear the advantages of our way of life," O'Connor said.

Asserting that "our beliefs about democracy lie at the heart of our effort," the governor said that an important phase of the defense program was that "in the organization of the schools we practice the democratic principles we profess."

"In the final analysis," he said, "democracy is a spirit, an attitude toward other human beings which is based on a respect for human personality and a belief in human intelligence."

"When school administration is infused with this spirit, it will find expression in school practice. With- (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

German Troopships Reach Syria and British Plan For an Immediate Attack

Both Belligerents Mustering Forces for Battle for Control of Middle East; London Hopes To Occupy Oil Section Before Nazis Arrive in Large Numbers; Goering Warns U. S.

NEW YORK, June 3—Tuesday.—(AP)—The Berlin radio in a Spanish language broadcast heard here by NBC early today said that the German air force next will attack Cyprus, Haifa and Alexandria, British near-eastern points.

(By The Associated Press)

The great belligerents moved quietly last night toward a showdown in the middle east, and it appeared that the Axis was ready at last to make a direct thrust at the Suez Canal.

German motorized troops have begun disembarking in French Syria at the port of Latakia, it was disclosed, and the first troopships to arrive — on May 29, even before the conquest of Crete — brought armored cars and mobile field guns.

With London informants unofficially acknowledging that Crete's loss knocked out the Mediterranean itself as a part of the Imperial lifeline, the British removed British women and children from the island of Cyprus against an aerial assault expected at any hour.

London Plans Action
London was understood to be preparing immediate military action against Syria both in the hope of preventing a major Nazi entrenchment and to hearten Turkey against the hour when the Axis knocks on her doors for passive or active help in the developing offensive on Egypt.

Telephone and telegraph communication was cut between Egypt and Syria.

The French for their part appeared headed for a fateful decision as to how far to cooperate with the Nazis, for General Maxime Weygand, the commander of the still considerable French forces in North Africa, hurried by special plane to Vichy to see Marshal Philippe Petain, the chief of state.

John McMullen and Wife Injured in Automobile Crash

FREDERICK, Md., June 2. (AP)—John McMullen of 218 Fayette St., Cumberland, Md., was brought to Frederick City Hospital late tonight with a dislocated hip and cut forehead following an automobile-truck collision near here.

His wife, Louise, also was hospitalized with severe head lacerations, but their young son escaped injury, Corporal Walter K. May of the state police said, when their car, driven by McMullen en route home, struck the rear of a tractor-trailer combination which was backing down a hill after incurring motor trouble.

100,000 Spaniards To Work in Germany

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—An agreement has been worked out between Germany and Spain by which 100,000 Spanish workers will be sent to Germany to alleviate labor shortage in the Reich. The German radio declared tonight in a broadcast heard by NBC.

London Daily Mail Asks Shakeup And New Ideas on the Home Front

LONDON, Tuesday, June 3 (AP)—The London Daily Mail, in the sharpest press criticism of the British cabinet in weeks, today asked in an editorial:

"When are we really going to get down to the job of winning the war? When are we going to run machines, factories and shipyards to full capacity; when are we going to see an end of masterly retreats xxx?"

Saying the country was seriously concerned about the way things are going, the editorial continued:

"Churchill declined to believe there was any uneasiness about

Weygand's talk with Petain occurred only a few hours after Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini met once again upon Brenner Pass, where five times before they had met in the twilight intervals between the ending of one adventure and the beginning of another, and the impression was received that another major offensive was being planned in that chill and lofty rendezvous.

May Move against U. S.

It is believed they took counsel as to how best to meet any American move that might grow out of President Roosevelt's expressed determination to defend the Western Hemisphere with the United States navy and not to permit a threat to America to arise in French West Africa, the Azores or other Atlantic islands.

In an effort to frighten first Britain and then, presumably, the United States in view of Washington's policy of aid to the British, Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering declared that the capture of Crete by aerially-transported troops had "proved before the whole world the words of the fuhrer: that there are no unconquerable islands."

Leaders Split on Granting of Wide Powers to F.D.R.

Mixed Reaction Greeted Plea He Be Given Blanket Authority

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—A request by the war department that President Roosevelt be given blanket powers to take over property "of any kind" for defense purposes aroused a mixed reaction tonight on Capitol Hill.

Some legislators expressed quick approval, others indicated opposition, while still others would not comment pending further study.

Along with its request, the war department sent a bill to carry it out. The measure, it was made known, had been approved in advance by the president, the navy and the Office of Production Management.

Exceeds Wilson's Powers

The authority asked was said officially to be more sweeping than that exercised sparingly by President Wilson in the World war.

In a letter to Speaker Rayburn, acting Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson said the proposed legislation would:

"Permit the acquisition of defense supplies and materials needed for the manufacture of defense items from recalcitrant owners with minimum delay and prompt compensation."

Would Stabilize Prices

"Tend to stabilize prices and prevent profiteering and hoarding, which the war department is now powerless to do. For example, extremely high prices for second hand machine tools, which in numerous cases seemed exorbitant, are now under some measure of control through purely voluntary agreements which are not legally enforceable and which continue only during the pleasure of the owner."

British Sources Say Nazi Losses In Crete Severe

20,000 Sea-borne Troops Destroyed before Island Evacuated

By LARRY ALLEN

ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT, June 2 (AP)—The British navy destroyed 20,000 Nazi sea-borne troops off the northern coast of Crete in the days before the Mediterranean fleet was assigned the grim task of steaming to the southern side of the island and evacuate its own troops, British sources said tonight.

These German losses were in addition to the thousands of paratroopers reported killed in the bitter land fight which lasted thirteen days and ended in another British withdrawal.

Losses on Land Severe
British losses on land, it was announced officially, were severe, and the navy—working under the terrific handicap of not having RAF protection—also suffered. But official figures have not yet been wholly available.

Two cruisers and four destroyers were lost by the British when they smashed the first Axis attempt to land reinforcements. One single Nazi convoy bearing 10,000 troops was shattered, sources here said.

Scores of other small fishing boats bearing perhaps 100 men each were likewise rammed and sunk, spilling thousands of men into the water.

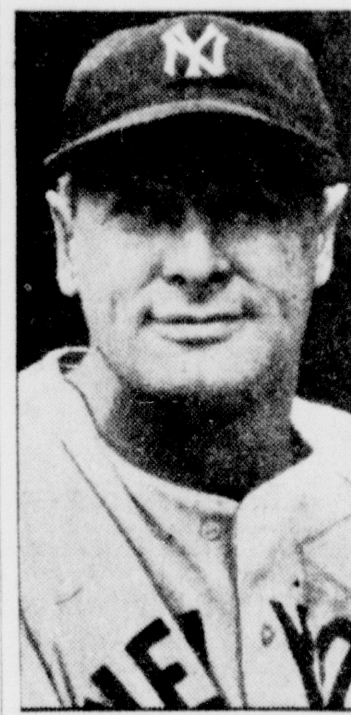

British Navy Suffers
The British navy also suffered in the retreat from Crete. Its cruisers and destroyers loaded with bloody, exhausted troops who had fought and crawled over the mountains to reach evacuation points.

Hundreds of Nazi planes made the sea lane between Crete and Egypt an inferno. Dog-tired British troops mounted their Bren guns on the decks of the warships to aid in fending off the blistering German air barrage.

More than 15,000 troops now have reached Egypt. Thousands were left behind. (The Germans said at least 13,000 were captured).

Philadelphia Boy Wins Decision by Finishing Strong

By WILLIAM O. VARN

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—Gus Dorazio, 189, of Philadelphia won a unanimous decision over Johnny Kapovich, 180, of Baltimore tonight, coming back strongly in the final two rounds of a ten-round bout with a fierce body attack which gave him his winning margin.

Dorazio got off to a fast start in the opening session, pounding the local boy freely about the body and landing several lefts and rights to the face that drew blood from Kapovich's nose and cut his lip.

Kapovich Takes Second

Kapovich came back to take the second, jabbing cautious lefts in Dorazio's face before they squared off in a slugfest for the third round which ended all even. The local lad took the fifth, holding Dorazio away with left jabs until he shot Gus' head back with a hard right just before the bell which found Kapovich leading lefts and rights at will.

The sixth was Dorazio's with a body attack which noticeably slowed Kapovich, although the home town fighter carried the fight to Dorazio to take the next round with hard rights and lefts to the face.

The visitor stalked Kapovich slowly in the seventh, taking light hits on the face to continue his telling body attack. Kapovich made (Continued on Page 8, Col. 1)

Rush for Production Blamed by Expert for Big Mine Disasters

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—

Reporting today to the Mine Inspectors' Institute of America on "recent mine explosions in West Virginia," N. P. Rhinehart blamed the disasters upon "the rush for production and extreme efficiency."

Rhinehart, chief of the West Virginia department of mines, declared that three recent explosions which cost 105 lives might have been avoided "if the ordinary and well known published requirements of the department of mines had been carried out."

The West Virginia mines chief led a forum on the subject in which other participants at the institute's thirty-second convention were J. W. Fitzgibbon of Arkansas; Marcus Kerr of Ohio; and R. D. Joseph of Pennsylvania.

"Iron Horse" of Baseball Played in 2,130 Consecutive Games; Ill for More than Two Years

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Lou Gehrig, great first baseman of the New York Yankees for fourteen years, died tonight after two years illness of a rare disease that everyone except he himself believed incurable.

The "iron horse" of baseball, who would have been thirty-eight years old June 19, passed away at his home in the presence of his wife after a critical span of only three weeks. He did not lose consciousness until just before death at 9:10 p. m. (EST).

The disease which erased Gehrig from the lineup of the mighty Yankees on May 2, 1939 was diagnosed as "amyotrophic lateral sclerosis," a hardening of the spinal cord which caused muscles to shrivel.

He wasted away sharply in the final weeks and was reported twenty-five pounds underweight and barely able to speak shortly before he died.

He had served for a year and a half as a member of the New York City Parole Commission and visited his office regularly until about a month ago, when he decided to remain at home to conserve his energy.

In his playing days Gehrig was one of baseball's greatest stars, but was most famous for his great physical feat in playing 2,130 consecutive regularly scheduled American League games in fourteen years.

Lived Clean, Played Clean

Lou Gehrig was synonymous with durability, clean living and clean play in baseball.

Nazi Infantry Unit Lands in Syria

ANKARA, TURKEY, June 2 (AP)—A Nazi infantry detachment geared for speed has landed at the French Syrian port of Latakia just south of the Turkish border, highly authoritative sources said today.

Armored cars and mobile field guns were among the equipment unloaded from coastal steamers which apparently hugged the coast to avoid British naval interception enroute from the Italian Dodecanese islands.

The German units were believed to have moved on southward to Beirut, Lebanon capital, more than 100 miles away. A good coastal road connects the two points.

Military observers here saw a strong possibility of an imminent German attack on Palestine, timed to coincide with a new offensive by the Axis into Egypt on the western approach to the Suez Canal.

(The Free French Brazzaville radio in French equatorial Africa reported that "Syria may soon become the main theater of operations in the far east," the British news agency Reuters said.)

R. D. Currie, district engineer for a commercial concern at Trucksville, Pa., discussing "major preventive measures" against explosions, listed ventilated as the "first line of defense."

Others were methods and devices used in detecting the presence of dangerous percentages of methane gas, and the use of equipment approved by the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

J. J. Rutledge, chief mine engineer of the Maryland Bureau of mines, also took part in the opening day's program.

The institute will come to a close Wednesday with election of officers and a banquet that evening.

There will be no session tomorrow, when a sightseeing tour has been arranged for the delegates, numbering about 150.

Court Broadens U. S. Control of Great Waterways

Rules Non-Navigable Portions Come under Flood Measure

By WILLIAM R. SPEAR
WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—The Supreme Court broadened the federal government's authority over the nation's waterways today in upholding the constitutionality of a $54,000,000 power and flood control dam across the Red River on the Oklahoma-Texas border.

A notable decision earlier in the term, involving the New River in Virginia, upheld federal jurisdiction over non-navigable portions of a navigable stream.

"And we now add that the power of flood control extends to the tributaries of navigable streams," said today's unanimous decision delivered by Justice Douglas.

The federal authority is exercised under the clause of the constitution which gives congress control over interstate commerce. The court found "no constitutional reason why congress or the courts should be blind to the engineering prospects of protecting the nation's arteries of commerce through control of the watersheds."

"There is no constitutional reason," it added, "why Congress can not under the commerce power, treat the watersheds as a key to flood control on navigable streams and their tributaries."

Gov. Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma had been fighting the project in the courts for four years. He charged that the dam would inundate 100,000 acres of land in his state.

The Supreme Court upheld a three-judge federal court which had dismissed the governor's suit for an injunction.

Military Services for Col. Lyon Today

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., June 2 (AP)—Full military services will be held here tomorrow for Lt. Col. Thompson A. Lyon, commander of the first battalion of the One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry.

The body will lie in state in the regimental recreation hall from 11 to 11:45 a. m. before being taken to the post chapel, where Capt. Frank Lambert, regimental chaplain, will officiate at services. Burial will be in the national cemetery at Arlington, Va.

Col. Lyon shot himself yesterday at the home of his mother in Hyattsville, Md. Relatives said he had been suffering from worry and overwork. County Medical Examiner Dr. James I. Boyd issued a certificate of suicide.

Feminine Ticket Out of Kermit Race

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 2 (AP)—The only feminine ticket in West Virginia's biennial "small town" elections faded from the scene today as the women candidates were replaced by men.

Four women, all Democrats, had aspired to municipal office at Kermit, in Mingo county. Without any explanation, party officials "scratched" their names from the ballot set up for tomorrow's voting.

The Mingo county community is one of 135 municipalities, most of them small, which will choose new officials at the June 3 elections.

The women who stepped out of the Kermit race were Mrs. Amanda Meade for recorder, and Mrs. Gladys Justice, Mrs. Maud Curry and Mrs. Myrtle Rouse, for council.

"Commence Firing" At Meade Monday

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., June 2 (AP)—The "commence firing" order will be given next Monday on Fort Meade's new 6,100-acre combat range, Col. Gilbert M. Allen, post commander, announced today.

All persons, military and civilian, will be barred from the danger areas of the range during the firing periods, which will be from 7:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. Night firing may be started later.

Both the post's regular army units and the Twenty-ninth division will use the new area, located south and southwest of Fort Meade's main installations.

The area has several separate ranges, with facilities for firing all infantry weapons. Although not all of them can be used at once, it is expected that some will be in operation daily throughout the summer and fall.

Debs To Come Out Earlier This Year

ST. LOUIS, June 2 (AP)—The social set, frankly worried over the outlook of things, is junking tradition to give this year's debutante's a break.

With more and more men being called up for military training the fair young ladies are facing what they fear may be a season of social chaos.

Eligible bachelors are disappearing all around them. Parents are uncertain about the state of the nation six months from now. And the girls themselves are engaged in war-aid activities.

So instead of waiting for the customary fall social whirl, many debutante daughters are planning to "come out" this summer while there still are plenty of young men around.

12 "Don't's" Listed For Car Drivers

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—A dozen "don't's" required reading for all Maryland drivers whose automobile licenses are subject to revocation, were disclosed today by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles W. Lee Elgin.

The warnings were printed on a card containing on the reverse side, instructions for parking a car, designed to aid the beginning driver.

Every driver who has committed an offense for which his license may be revoked, Elgin said, must be prepared to give correct instructions regarding the twelve "don't's" printed on the card. They are:

1. Don't fail to dim your lights.
2. Don't pass on top of hills or curves.
3. Don't fail to stop at stop signs.
4. Don't drive when drinking.
5. Don't fail to stop and give name after accident.
6. Don't drive too fast, use judgment.
7. Don't fail to give people walking the right of way.
8. Don't fail to keep your brakes right.
9. Don't drive without head or tail-lights.
10. Don't try to beat traffic lights.
11. Don't take other driver's right of way.
12. Don't fail to be polite; it costs nothing.

Great First

the "Iron Horse," an institution as unalterable as time itself.

Over a period of 14 years he appeared in every game the New York Yankees played — American League, World Series, spring training or exhibition—and it was because of his incomparable record that his voluntary withdrawal from the lineup May 2, 1939 was so dramatic and the subsequent discovery that he was suffering from a form of infantile paralysis so shocking.

A pall was cast over the sports world and the fact that his team continued on its orderly course as a fourth consecutive world championship had no effect on the opinion of most fans that his forced retirement ended an historic era in baseball.

He was a holdover from the halcyon days of Babe Ruth, Rogers Hornsby, Frank Frisch and the other heroes.

A Part Of New York

He was as much a part of New York as Central Park. Born in Manhattan June 19, 1903, he grew up in and with the metropolis. As a high school athlete he attained some prominence and was an all-around sports star at Columbia University. Throughout his career he was called "Columbia Lou."

At the age of 20 he left Columbia in 1923 and signed with the Yankees. Except for parts of the 1923 and 1924 season when he was sent under option to Hartford in the Eastern League, he never played with any other club.

After his withdrawal from baseball he retained his identity with New York by accepting a position on the city's prison parole board.

Remarkable Record

Gehrig began his remarkable consecutive game streak with the Yankees in 1925 when, on June 1, he was sent into a game as a pinch-hitter. The next day manager Miller Huggins used him at first base in place of Wally Pipp and he never left the post until he had played 2,130 successive regularly scheduled American League games. He also played in 34 world series contests and countless exhibitions.

Lou was a big, handsome, dimple-cheeked fellow who always looked the picture of health. He stood six feet, one inch and weighed 205 pounds. Playing every game because a fetish with him and because of this, or because of his naturally careful habits, he trained more faithfully than almost any other player in the major leagues.

Like all baseball veterans he had injuries. Once in 1934 he was struck by a pitched ball during an exhibition game at Norfolk, Va., and suffered a moderate concussion. Again in 1937 he hurt a finger on his right hand. In 1938 he broke a thumb. But nothing that ever happened to him over that long stretch of years kept him from getting into the lineup at least briefly every game.

For the public this was the notable feature of Gehrig's career. But for the poets connected with the sport

Margaret Fields Starts Prison Term

BALTIMORE, June 2 (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Fields, former cashier of the Savings Bank of Nanticoke, Wicomico county, today began a two-year prison sentence while she awaited the birth of a child.

The sentence was reaffirmed in Federal Court when Judge W. Calvin Chestnut refused to modify or suspend the prison term imposed last November 23.

After Mrs. Fields pleaded guilty last November, Judge Chestnut delayed start of the sentence until June 1.

United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn asked that the sentence be reaffirmed when Mrs. Fields' attorney, Simon Sobeloff, told the court that the defendant's baby had been born in April, but had lived only a day.

Mrs. Fields gave herself up, and was returned from Minneapolis after the bank shortage and her disappearance were disclosed last October.

In reaffirming the sentence, the judge said: "My reports show me that there was a defalcation of nearly $20,000 without any extenuating circumstances, and I feel that the sentence is as lenient as I could make it."

Harridge and Giles Praise Lou Gehrig

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—William Harridge, president of the American League, expressed deep regret tonight at the death of Lou Gehrig, one of baseball's greatest stars.

"The passing of Lou Gehrig," said Mr. Harridge, "has removed from baseball one of its most beloved and outstanding players. His conduct and sportsmanship on and off the playing field will remain an everlasting monument to his memory."

"We in the American League are shocked at his untimely death," Warren C. Giles, general manager of the world champion Cincinnati Reds, paid tribute to Gehrig with the simple statement:

"He was a great, great guy."

German Warplanes Said To Have Sunk 10,000 Ton Ship

BERLIN, June 2 (AP)—German warplanes destroyed a heavily loaded 10,000 ton merchant ship during an attack on a convoy along the eastern British coast today, DNB, official German news agency announced.

Another ship of 5,000 tons was said to have suffered severe damage 300 miles west of the Faroe Islands, at the northern tip of Scotland.

Individual British planes bombed localities "here and there" in Schleswig-Holstein, Denmark, today without causing important damage, DNB also reported.

German pursuit planes and anti-aircraft fire forced the attackers back, DNB said, and one British bomber was shot down into the North Sea.

No More Awnings, So Fire Burns Out

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—A sixteenth floor awning of an apartment house caught fire today. Firemen rushed up and extinguished it. But by that time falling embers had ignited a fifteenth floor awning.

British Marine Bags 20 Planes With Single Gun

ALEXANDRIA, June 2 (AP)—A young British marine firing the last anti-aircraft gun in action at Crete, capital of Crete, brought down twenty German bombers before the British were forced to withdraw, one of his comrades said on his arrival today from the Nazi-conquered island.

The gunner, Lance Corporal Thomas Neal, now is missing with five others members of the last marine detachment to leave Crete.

Private Patrick Mahoney, of Liverpool, who operated the searchlight near the gun position, told how Neal sang and shouted defiance at swarms of Stuka bombers as he pumped hundreds of two inch shells into the attackers.

"From the moment the Germans started the attack on Crete with heavy bombing and machine gunning," Mahoney related, "Neal, with three companions helping to operate the gun and two others passing ammunition, fired almost continuously."

"Neal's gun was still firing on May 27, the day the last of us cleared out of Crete. I don't know whether he got away alive."

"Each time the group of Nazi dive bombers came over, Neal would let all but the last plane pass. Then he would concentrate on it. He got nine within two days and at least twenty within the fortnight."

The Nazis soon caught on to the tactic, Mahoney continued, "so they decided to get him by trickery."

"They kept sending over ten to twenty planes, but behind these more, there trailed three more. Neal took the usual shots at the last plane of the first formation, and the three trailing planes then plastered his gun position repeatedly with sticks of heavy bombs."

"Nazi Trick Bombs"

"But they failed to get him. Neal's gun kept firing while bombs burst about him, some firing the gasoline dumps and ammunition depots nearby with terrific explosions."

"Neal sang and shouted encouragement to his companions."

"Then he countered the Nazi counter-tactic. He attached the gun to a light lorry, and immediately after firing at the last plane of a formation, Neal and other marines hopped into the lorry and moved the gun to another position."

"Nazi bombs kept bursting on spots Neal and his gun had just abandoned," Mahoney chuckled.

From another point, the gun would go into action again, and shortly before Mahoney left he said he saw Neal bag two Stukas in a ten-machine formation.

"Permit the use of some needed part of a manufacturing plant in cases in which the facilities of the entire plant are not required."

Could Seize Tools

"Permit the prompt acquisition and effective employment of required equipment, such as machine tools not presently employed or not fully employed in the interest of the national defense, as for example a large, expensive, special-purpose machine tool which is used very little, but which is not for sale because its owner desires to retain it for his own occasional use."

"Permit the acquisition and use of manufacturing facilities not otherwise available. In several instances, the equipment in small plants has been sold piecemeal at auction under court orders in bankruptcy proceedings, thus disrupting efficient installations and scattering valuable tools."

May Take Over Plants

"Permit the taking over of plants for the purpose of manufacturing articles not usually produced by such plants and not capable of being produced by them without changes in installations."

"Permit the acquisition of contracts and contract rights, as distinguished from finished articles."

"Enable the war department to compel compliance with defense needs from corporations and plants under foreign ownership or control."

Whether the legislation might be used to end strikes affecting defense orders was not stated. It appeared, however, that the bill might be a potent weapon in such cases if the government invoked it to take over a strike-bound plant. President Roosevelt has said that there can not be strikes against the government.

A primary purpose of the request, officials said, was to remove "ambiguities" in existing legislation authorizing the president to enforce a right of way for defense orders. The proposed legislation provides for fair compensation for any property requisitioned. It would empower the president to "requisition and take over either temporarily or permanently, property of any kind or character, whether real or personal, tangible or intangible, or any part thereof" which could be used in any way for national defense.

Could Sell Property

The president would be empowered to use, sell or otherwise dispose of any property, right or interest taken over under the legislation.

British Marine Bags 20 Planes With Single Gun

Shoots Down One Nazi Bomber after Another in Battle of Crete

By LARRY ALLEN
ALEXANDRIA, June 2 (AP)—A young British marine firing the last anti-aircraft gun in action at Crete, capital of Crete, brought down twenty German bombers before the British were forced to withdraw, one of his comrades said on his arrival today from the Nazi-conquered island.

The gunner, Lance Corporal Thomas Neal, now is missing with five others members of the last marine detachment to leave Crete.

Private Patrick Mahoney, of Liverpool, who operated the searchlight near the gun position, told how Neal sang and shouted defiance at swarms of Stuka bombers as he pumped hundreds of two inch shells into the attackers.

"From the moment the Germans started the attack on Crete with heavy bombing and machine gunning," Mahoney related, "Neal, with three companions helping to operate the gun and two others passing ammunition, fired almost continuously."

"Neal's gun was still firing on May 27, the day the last of us cleared out of Crete. I don't know whether he got away alive."

"Each time the group of Nazi dive bombers came over, Neal would let all but the last plane pass. Then he would concentrate on it. He got nine within two days and at least twenty within the fortnight."

The Nazis soon caught on to the tactic, Mahoney continued, "so they decided to get him by trickery."

"They kept sending over ten to twenty planes, but behind these more, there trailed three more. Neal took the usual shots at the last plane of the first formation, and the three trailing planes then plastered his gun position repeatedly with sticks of heavy bombs."

"Nazi Trick Bombs"

"But they failed to get him. Neal's gun kept firing while bombs burst about him, some firing the gasoline dumps and ammunition depots nearby with terrific explosions."

"Neal sang and shouted encouragement to his companions."

"Then he countered the Nazi counter-tactic. He attached the gun to a light lorry, and immediately after firing at the last plane of a formation, Neal and other marines hopped into the lorry and moved the gun to another position."

"Nazi bombs kept bursting on spots Neal and his gun had just abandoned," Mahoney chuckled.

Fired For Hours

At the same time, an indication that the government may be preparing to arm itself with a powerful anti-strike weapon was seen in a request made by the war department to Congress for sweeping powers for the president to requisition any property necessary to the national defense.

This, some legislators pointed out, would permit the government, if it desired to take over strike-bound plants. President Roosevelt has said there can be no strikes against the government.

There was talk at the capital, too, of a possible necessity for longer working hours. Senators Norris (Ind-Neb) and Taft (R-Ohio) told reporters the demands of the defense emergency might require a relaxation of the general forty-hour week.

4,500 on CIO Strike

About 4,500 members of the CIO's International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union were involved in the San Francisco warehouse strike.

Some 800 employees of the main plant at the Detroit Steel Products Company have been on strike since May 14. They were joined yesterday by 250 employees of the spring plant.

The strikes were called by the CIO United Automobile Workers. Victor F. Dewey, company president, said the union demanded bargaining rights and an election, but had not asked a wage increase. A union spokesman declared the management had refused to meet with union representatives.

The Pittsburgh strike caused particular concern among defense officials because the truckers have been handling a wide variety of armament materials produced in the great steel center.

The chief issues between the AFL teamsters union and the management of 179 concerns are demands for a ten-cent increase in the basic wage rate of eighty-five cents an hour, paid vacations and maintenance of a forty-eight-hour week.

Mediation Board Acts

The Defense Mediation Board acted in the Bethlehem Shipbuilding strike almost immediately after Secretary Perkins certified to it the dispute between the company and the AFL's San Francisco Bay Metal Trades Council.

Heretofore, the board has kept hands off the shipbuilding tie up on the grounds that a walkout of AFL and CIO machinists was an "outlaw strike" in violation of a contract.

The metal trades council negotiated a coast-wide agreement calling for $112 an hour with time and one-half for overtime. Nevertheless, the machinists struck for $113 an hour and double time for overtime. This walkout of less than 2,000 men tied up work by 15,000 others.

Bethlehem, however, was not a party to the agreement. Hence the board can step in without reversing its previous attitude. About 5,000 are employed in Bethlehem's San Francisco bay establishments.

Medical Men Urged To Aid in Defense

CLEVELAND, June 2 (AP)—American medical men were told today that they must stop scrapping with the government and among themselves and begin organizing an all-out program of national medical defense.

Dr. Frank H. Lahey of Boston, Mass., new president of the American Medical Association, told the House of Delegates at the opening of AMA's annual meeting that in the present emergency the medical profession must abandon "suits, privileges, personalities and personal opinion" for the national good under a decision "to be made soon" on this country's position in the present war.

His statements were considered particularly forceful because the association was fined $2,500 last Thursday in federal district court in Washington for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Aside from general national defense purposes, any requisitioned material might be used also, it was stated, "in the construction, manufacture, production, transportation, repair, testing or storage of military or naval supplies or other articles, commodities, materials, machinery or equipment for national defense."

The requisition legislation was introduced in the Senate by Chairman Reynolds (D-NC) of the Military Affairs committee, who said that he had not yet made up his mind regarding it.

$4,903,519 for State Welfare Work in '41

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—The Federal Works Agency was allocated tentative grants totaling $4,903,519 for welfare work in Maryland for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The figures were included in tables published today in records of hearings by a house sub-committee on federal works agency appropriations for the next fiscal year.

An allocation of $2,255,000 for old age assistance was the largest amount listed under Social Security board plans. The board estimated 20,000 persons in Maryland would receive aid during the next year.

Federal funds for aid to the blind totaled $92,000 for an estimated 647 persons in the state. Also listed were proposed allocations of $29,519 for public employment offices and $817,000 for unemployment compensation administration.

More Strikes Cause New Delays In National Defense Production

(By The Associated Press)
Warehouse workers in the San Francisco Bay area struck yesterday (Monday), and a two-week-old walkout at the Detroit steel products company spread to another plant to delay work on steel window and door sashes ordered for army training centers and defense production units.

Coming on top of a Sunday strike by 2,200 truck drivers and helpers in the Pittsburgh area, the walkouts confronted defense officials with an apparent new wave of labor disputes at a time when they were talking of a vital need for greater and faster defense production.

Meantime, the Defense Mediation Board began a new government effort to end the tie up of $500,000,000 of ship construction and repair work in eleven San Francisco shipyards and drydocks. It telegraphed both management and labor at the San Francisco plant of the Bethlehem shipbuilding company to "show their patriotism" by arranging "immediate resumption of production" pending a final settlement of their dispute. The board called a hearing for June 9 in Washington on the case.

Injury May Force Snead out of Open

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 2 (AP)—Samuel Jackson Snead, who had to withdraw from the Goodall round-robin two weeks ago because of a back injury, may not be able to start in the forty-fifth U. S. open golf championship which gets under way at the Colonial Club on Thursday.

Sam came in from Oklahoma City this morning, but hit no more than a few iron shots. The first few felt pretty good, but then he tried to whittle into a No. 3 iron and the pain almost knocked him down.

Snead has suffered from an injured vertebra near the base of his spine for two years, and aggravated the injury several weeks ago when he slipped on a rock while fishing.

Another "cripple" in the field is Craig Wood, the man who pulled a back muscle because he sneezed at the moment he stooped to pick up a razor blade. The first two days he was here he had his back taped, but today he tried wearing a polo belt, and reported better results. Wood shot a 74.

Chrysler Workers Get Wage Increase

DETROIT, June 2 (AP)—Richard Frankenstein, director of the Chrysler Division of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) announced tonight negotiations had been completed with Chrysler Corporation for a revision of wage rates.

He said 70,000 Chrysler workers represented by the union would be given a flat pay boost of eight cents an hour over their current rates, effective June 1.

American Shoots Up Two Messerschmitts

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—RAF daylight fighters ranging over northern France and the English channel today swooped low out of the clouds to attack motor transport, airdromes and Nazi torpedo boats.

The air ministry news service reported that an American pilot officer made a sortie against a Nazi flying field where he shot up two Messerschmitts on the ground.

A British pilot strafed military transport drawn up beside the road and saw troops running from the vehicles throwing themselves flat.

During the day, the air ministry said, raiders dropped bombs in the northeast of England but there was only minor damage.

Two German planes were shot down by the RAF, it was stated officially.

Two New Companies Formed at Edgewood

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—The army formed two new companies of special troops at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., today to augment defenses against gas attack in war time.

The Second Chemical Company (decontamination) of about 200 officers and men, has the task of eliminating any enemy bases and chemicals used against supply and evacuation establishments.

The First Chemical Company (impregnating), including about 150 officers and men, decontaminates and renovates clothing of soldiers who have been exposed to persistent gases.

At Edgewood the new units will work with other special detachments, including two laboratory chemical companies which operate field laboratories to detect any new chemicals used by a foe.

New Drive Likely To Follow Parley At Brenner Pass

Action Expected To Result from Mussolini-Hitler Conference

ROME, June 2 (AP)—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini met at Brenner Pass again today, presumably discussing such questions as how to meet any American move resulting from President Roosevelt's program to defend the Western Hemisphere with the United States navy—a program also involving French West Africa, the Azores and other Atlantic islands.

They talked too—or so it appeared—about the next war move in the Axis powers now that Crete has been wrested from the British. Some Fascists predicted privately that Crete would become the base for new Italian attacks—particularly from the air—on the British Imperial bastions in Alexandria, Egypt, the Mediterranean islands of Cyprus and Haifa, the oil port of Palestine.

Suez Likely Objective

Such a major objective as the middle east—with its oil fields in Iraq, its pipeline through Syria and Palestine, and the Suez Canal—could not have been absent from the agenda, observers here agreed.

On all this there was little specific information—the official communiqué stated only that the "political situation" was canvassed and "complete agreement on points of view"—but unofficial sources here made it plain that more action was to come.

Virginia Gayda, a Fascist journalistic spokesman, declared simply: "New developments in the Mediterranean war will be seen soon as a consequence of the new Axis victory."

It was Gayda, too, who presented the only estimate made here as to British casualties in Crete. He put at 45,000 British's loss in men killed or captured and described as false British statements that 15,000 men had been withdrawn by sea.

Dictators Meet in Secret

A secrecy tighter than usual surrounded the meeting of the two Axis dictators at Brenner Pass. Not even the customary advance rumors of such a meeting leaked out, and afterward official sources were impenetrable.

Diplomatic pressure on Russia and Turkey to open new routes for an Axis march into Palestine and Iraq also was believed a like topic.

Some observers said that while Germany dealt with Russia, Italy might take on the task of persuading Turkey to abandon her pro-British attitude.

The spectacular success of paratrooper invaders in Crete was cheered by those who leaned to the theory that Hitler and Mussolini projected a lightning attack on the British Isles.

They reasoned that Britain must be conquered before the conflict could end and that such a conquest must take place before the United States supplies of food and war materials could start to turn the tide.

As for the United States, it seemed certain that plans to meet any menace from that quarter were discussed by Hitler and Mussolini, but it was agreed that nothing had yet been done by America to require Axis action.

DEATH AT THE SWITCH

RICHARD HOUGHTON

SYNOPSIS
Henry Potter starts to walk to the village in the rain for an evening of checkers. His umbrella collapses and he seeks shelter at long closed Willett's, where he meets a stranger named John Jones, whom Henry suspects is a policeman assigned to the job of shadowing him. Henry goes to live in a house and learns that the dead man left a letter in which Ives foretold his own death.

CHAPTER NINE
"A MAN wouldn't stop in the middle of a letter like that," John Jones asserted. He drew another long cigar from an inner pocket and excitedly bit off the end.
"It sounds strange to me," said Henry. "He wrote, 'Evil will not listen to me.' What did he mean?"
"Just a manner of expression," declared the big man impatiently. His blue eyes had lighted up. "The important thing is to find the second sheet of paper."

"I'm afraid we never will," Mrs. Willett, the housekeeper, informed them. "The only thing I found—just a minute before you knocked on the door—was a charred piece of paper in the fireplace. I left it there. I thought maybe the detectives would have some way of reading it."

Henry and persistent Mr. Jones followed Mrs. Willett into the cold living room. The big man got down on his knees and studied the piece of paper to which Mrs. Willett referred. It was black—almost ready to crumble into ash.
Mr. Jones grunted his disappointment. "Looks like the same size sheet of paper all right, but nobody will ever read it." He dusted off his knees as he rose to his feet. In one hand he had miraculously picked up the only intact part of the paper. He carried it to a window. "Yep, there's part of the Spiritualist church letterhead still to be seen—but that's all. This is the second half of the letter the murdered man wrote. Someone deliberately destroyed it!"

Henry was bewildered. "But why would anyone destroy the second half and not the first?"
"Maybe the two pieces weren't together."

"You'd better put that paper back in the fireplace," snapped Mrs. Willett. "I don't say you could touch it. That's for the detectives."

"Pardon me, ma'am," apologized John Jones. There was no expression on his face. He carefully returned the flimsy bit of evidence.

Henry was studying him with narrowed eyes. If John Jones was a detective, why didn't he say so? Mrs. Willett led them back to the kitchen. "I can't think of anyone who would want to kill poor Mr. Ives," she said, her temporary displeasure with Mr. Jones forgotten in her greater sorrow. "He did so much for everyone. He gave away almost everything he had. See, there is hardly anything left."

Henry had to admit that the house was dismal. In the silence, while no one spoke, he heard rain dripping into a pan in the attic. A loose shutter rattled in the wind.

Old George, staring blankly at him from across the table, gave him a creepy chill.

They all sat down. "Ives must have had an enemy," Henry insisted. "He couldn't have been killed without reason."

Mrs. Willett shook her head. "I've puzzled it over and over. There's no one."

The old man piped up. "How

Mr. Jones crouched and studied the piece of paper.

about the Evil Thing in his letter?"
"Father, you don't understand. That was just his manner of speaking. It was a condition he fought, not a person."

"He said it wouldn't listen to him."

Mrs. Willett sighed. "If he could only come back and tell us!"
"We must be practical," Henry reminded her. "We've got to look for clues. Maybe he had old letters..."

"The police took them all—except the one we found in the tobacco jar."

John Jones coughed. "Was he interested in anything outside his home—in any way that he might have made an enemy of one of the railroad club members without your knowing it?"

"His only other interest was his charities."

"Was he especially interested in model railroading?"

"No. The others were, but he hated it!"

Henry frowned. "But if he hated it, why..."

Mrs. Willett's eyes were pained. "I tried to get him to tell me why he went to the club meetings—why he played with trains if he didn't like them. He wouldn't say. I feel sure the answer to his death is there!"

"He was killed by someone in that basement last night," Henry agreed. "We know that. There are only seven persons who could possibly have done it."

"Eight," Mr. Jones reminded him. "—if you count yourself."

Henry was annoyed. "Alright, eight. If we trace Mr. Ives' connection with each of the eight we should find the answer."

"The police ought to have given 'em all the third degree while they were together," Jones declared.

"They were so sure they had the right man that they let the rest go. Now that they've learned their mistake they'll never have as good a chance again."

"Why couldn't they call another meeting of the model railroad club?" Mrs. Willett asked. "No one would stay away. It would look like he was guilty."

"You've got something there!" Mrs. Willett's father leered.

"Maybe Ives will come, too."

"Father!" Mrs. Willett paled, then her eyes gradually lightened and she almost smiled. "Why not? Mr. Ives said he would!"

Henry drew a deep breath. "You mean he'd come back from the grave to point out his murderer?"

"He and I know that the dead do come back, Mr. Potter. You may scoff, but there are too many proofs!"

John Jones nodded. His cigar accented his agreement. It's worth trying."

Henry's mouth opened. For a moment he couldn't speak. "Surely you don't think he actually can do it!"

"Whether he can or not, it will be an interesting psychological experiment," the big man told him.

"Suppose you were a murderer and were brought back to the scene of your crime, and you were told that the dead man was a Spiritualist who believed he could come back after death? Suppose a test was arranged, and in the room with you were police, watching your every action. Could you hide your guilt?"

"That's it! That's it!" cried old George.

"Hush, Father," Mrs. Willett was breathless. "You men may think he can't come back—but he will!"

John Jones was chewing on his cigar. "Let's see. What could we have in the way of a test? Suppose we start the train going around and around the room. Suppose we station each member of the club at a different point along the track, and announce that Ives will try to derail the train in front of the man who killed him?"

"I'll tell him!" cried Mrs. Willett.

Henry frowned. "Tell who?"

"I'll tell Mr. Ives to do it! I know he can. It is such a little thing to move one of those tiny switches."

CHRYSANTHEMUMS FROM CUTTINGS

Chrysanthemums which grow from "slips" or cuttings usually are more vigorous and produce more bushy plants than do divisions made from the same plant.

REMOVE LOWER LEAVES FROM CUTTING

Cuttings can be taken in early spring, even as late as June if non-flowering shoots are still obtainable. Take cuttings about four inches long. With a sharp knife remove the lower leaves on each cutting as shown in the Garden-Graph. The leaf area at the top of the cutting need not be cut unless there is an excessive amount of foliage.

Plant the cuttings in a mixture of sand and peat. Set them so that at least one or two of the lower nodes are buried. Water well and keep the cuttings shaded for several days. Do not allow the rooting soil to dry out, but do not keep it more than "just moist."

After the roots become well formed (about one-half inch long) the cuttings can be potted up.

Reaffirmed Rather Than Extended

CONCLUSION has been drawn that Congress may attempt unprecedented control of congressional primaries in consequence of the recent New Orleans decision by the federal supreme court, but competent observers point out that the decision is after all but a reaffirmation of powers the Congress has always possessed.

The decision, which was by a vote of four to three, was handed down in the case of New Orleans election officials accused of ballot alterations and fraudulent counting, and has been described as giving Congress the right to control the primary elections.

"A more reasonable interpretation would be," says the New York Herald Tribune, "that the court simply has reaffirmed the powers which Congress under the constitution may exercise over congressional elections and has recognized the fact that, at least in the southern states, the choice of a candidate in the primaries means in fact his election (barring death) in the November elections. Inasmuch as the only real contest in many southern states is between members of the same party seeking their party's nomination rather than between the candidates named by the two opposing parties, it is apparent that the primary is a vital part of the electoral process."

"When the framers of the constitution came to consider the problem of who should have the right to vote in congressional elections they left the mechanics to the states, with only two main provisos. The first of these was that the requirements in each state must be the same as those for voting at elections to the most numerous branch of its own legislature. The second was that 'Congress may at any time make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators.'"

"It is interesting to note that the makers of the constitution did not say whether the elections must all be by ballot, or whether they must be by Congress district or by each state at large. In other words, they left the exact procedure to each state. In actual custom Congress has been content to leave these powers in the hands of the states and has forgone the temptation to 'make or alter regulations.'"

Thus it appears that the Congress has had more authority to regulate congressional elections and primaries than it has ever attempted to exercise, and, as the Herald Tribune says, the right in this case has been reaffirmed rather than enlarged.

The Grave Menace Of Inflation

SHARP WARNING of the dangers of inflation as a result of monetary manipulation comes from the Republican members of the House Coinage committee in a minority report opposing continuation of the president's power further to devalue the dollar.

"As a consequence of the defense effort," the minority report said, "the dangers of inflation are much more actual and imminent than they were even two years ago. As production approaches capacity, the danger of inflation becomes ever more acute."

The report urged the House to limit the maximum price paid for foreign gold to the present rate—$35 an ounce. At the same time the Republicans urged that the stabilization fund be reduced from $2,000,000,000 to $200,000,000, using the difference of $1,800,000,000 to defray part of the defense expenditures, thus reducing the amount of inflationary borrowing.

The Republicans cited the Federal Reserve report of December 21 which strongly recommended that "in view of the completely changed international situation during the past year, the power to further devalue the dollar in terms of gold is no longer necessary or desirable and should be permitted to elapse."

"Devaluation of the dollar has produced a number of consequences other than those which the administration alleged would result," the minority report disclosed. "One consequence of raising the world price of gold to $35 an ounce has been to subsidize Japan in her war with China through the purchase of $700,000,000 of gold from Japan since 1938."

"Forcing interest rates down was another consequence of raising the world price of gold," the report continued. "Although low rates of interest saved the Treasury millions in its financing of the vast public debt, abnormally low returns on legitimate business investments have cost the general public billions. Still worse, this policy prolonged the depression, retarded recovery and thereby has slowed up the people's efforts to rearm America."

The Republican group pointed out that there are only two possible reasons why the administration wants to keep this power.

"First, despite its repeated disavowals, the administration could wish to have this power available so that it might finance national defense by again 'clipping the coin.' Certainly the administration's fight to continue the existence of this power indicates that it means to use it."

The second reason for the administration's desire to continue the power "is because it wants power for the sake of having power," the report continued. "These are the only two reasons apparent to us to explain the administration's determined fight to have the legislation enacted in its present form. Nor has the administration offered any others."

David Lawrence, in the United States News, declares that we are on the threshold of "an inflation of incalculable proportions," and sounds the warning that "the economic collapse that must come day follow such foolhardy policies as are being pursued today must inevitably produce a terrible reaction against democratic government and sow the seeds of fascism in America."

Against that danger, accordingly, all possible safeguards should be provided, and the Republicans in Congress are to be commended for their efforts to provide them.

Was It Lack of Oil Or Something Else?

RESUMPTION of the Nazi blitzkrieg over the British Isles prompts speculation as to the lull of nearly three weeks in such attacks. For ten days before and after the beginning of the German attack on Crete no heavy bombings were carried out. What was the reason?

One can but guess. Was the weather continuously so bad as to preclude operations? That is not likely. Is it because the offensive core of the Nazi air force is smaller than was supposed? Stories from Crete tell of the large number of planes involved and of their daring tactics. Does that mean that Germany's most skillful flyers, who ordinarily would be attacking Britain, were taken to Greece especially for the Mediterranean offensive?

Does the necessity of conserving oil and gasoline permit of only one big Nazi operation at a time? Or is oil-bearing transport ordinarily used in Northern France and the Low Countries tied up by the exigencies of the long haul through the Balkans?

The real explanation of this strange lull over the British Isles, at a season when air activity might have been expected to be at its height, may never be known. It may be unimportant. Or it may be of the highest import. Whatever it is, it was a welcome respite for harassed Londoners and their neighbors.

Hitler and Gibraltar

SHOULD Germany now attempt to occupy France's African colonies, there may be plenty of action around Gibraltar. Hitler will want the shortest possible approach to the new territory.

With the British fleet in the Mediterranean any approach to Africa across that sea is long and fraught with grave dangers for him. But with Gibraltar in his possession he could control the strait with shore guns and transport men and equipment to French and Spanish Africa.

Apparently Spain has been slow to give Hitler the "go" signal through that country. But it is unlikely that Spain will resist if Franco becomes convinced that Hitler is fully resolved to go through Spain. Hitler will probably hold out the lure to Spain that, with much of Africa in his possession, Spain's food problem would be solved.

At the outset of any Gibraltar campaign, which would involve the downfall of a free Portuguese government, the race would be for islands such as the Azores, the Canaries, the Cape Verde, Britain could win what race with ease. The war would then include a most intensive blockade of the west coast of Africa as a safeguard against any Hitler hope of breaking into the sea lanes of the world from bases on the Dark Continent.

Peace, we are reminded, has its horrors, too. Just wait until the war ends and all those European generals and admirals flood the market with their memoirs!

The price control program ought to control the price of an evening's entertainment when a fellow hasn't much to spend in showing a girl a good time.

Dancing cures flat feet, we are told. But how can anyone suffering from a severe case of fallen arches get up enough gumption to go jitter-bugging?

O Foolish Fellow!

By MARSHALL MASLIN

My friend came to me and said he was unhappy and didn't know what to do about it. He supposed he had been born unhappy and would remain miserable to the end of his days. He was like that because his Chemical Mixture had made him as he was it couldn't be changed.

I told him he was mistaken about his Chemical Mixture. He merely thought he was unhappy but inside of him he was a happy individual. How did I know? Because I had known him for a long time and often I'd seen him trying to be a sour philosopher and failing because his innate cheerfulness kept breaking through his artificial clouds of gloom. . . . If he were an unhappy man who thought he was happy, I wouldn't say a word about it. Because if a man's happy, let him be happy—that's what I say—and the man who goes out of his way to destroy his fair bubble of joy is a mean and malicious scoundrel. Or a depraved fool. Or a dangerous child.

But my friend was really happy, and should not forget that. . . . I told him of something that had happened to me one day, when I thought myself depressed. The world seemed a woeful place and I hated it. I lived in a black hole and I pitied those simple folk who smiled and who had energy and a cheerful faith in life. Poor idiots! I said to myself, who didn't know they walked about a furious volcano. In such a mood I walked the streets, in a state of mind to despise all men and women. I moved through crowds resenting the presence of humanity, sneering. . . . At least, I THOUGHT I was sneering. Although with one part of my mind I was being miserable.

Then I suddenly discovered something. As I walked along I found myself liking the strangers I saw. I'd pass a young girl in a pretty new dress and I'd find myself thinking, "There's a nice youngster." I'd meet a woman with a serene beauty all about her and I'd be thinking, "What a beautiful woman!" I'd meet an old man and I'd think, "He has a strong face." I'd encounter a young fellow and judge him kindly, "There's a fine lad." Wherever I went, I made cheerful observations about human beings I'd never seen before. . . . and in a flash I knew I was NOT unhappy.

Neither can YOU be a gloom, my friend, and think such thoughts at the same time. Only an optimist can do that. So I am convinced that you, poor idiot, are a happy man. You think yourself a Stagnant Swamp, but a spring of sweet water bubbles up from the bottom of you.

War Department Is Doing Good Job, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—

The War Department is in for a barrage of criticism for "building another old style mass army" and not taking advantage of the German examples of "motorized" small forces and smashing, combined armored airplanes and armored land attack.

The rumbling has already started and it is going to get louder. Says Representative Ross Collins: "The Germans who broke the French line at Sedan pushed fingers to steel to the sea, cut off British and Belgian forces in Flanders and almost in one stroke conquered France's army of 5,000,000 soldiers did not exceed $150,000 men."

That is the kind of argument that starts public resentment and suspicion. Mr. Collins is in a position on the military affairs committee to know his facts. As this column has done, beginning even earlier, he has been insisting on motorization, modernization and mechanization for many years—even before the Germans started it.

—O—

Wrong Conclusion
But to jump from the proved soundness of that position to any conclusion that the army has been wrong in planning an army of about a million and a half with provision for expansion to four million if necessary, or in adopting conscription, or in providing in addition to panzer divisions, plenty of old time infantry and artillery is something else again.

It must be admitted that some bad mistakes have been made throughout the years since Hitler began. The record of the general staff itself is not too good. It didn't insist on the vast appropriations necessary to modernize our own equipment. It wouldn't have done any good, because this administration was too highly concentrated on spending billions for other purposes—or lack of purpose.

The general staff understood this, but they could and should have made a record and backed it with what experiments at the infantry laboratory at Fort Benning had discovered about these new tactics as early as the Germans did. The Recovery Act of 1933 made almost unlimited millions available for mechanization and motorization of army tactical units. They were not used for that purpose, but the army did not howl.

—O—

Mistake by Congress
It was a grotesque mistake also to conscript men for only one year's service when it was a certainty that, within that year, there would be no sufficient equipment to train them in modern methods of war—but the Congress made that mistake—not the War Department.

O. K. All that is water over the dam. The new attack will be on what the War department is doing now. It is moving to mechanization, motorization and panzer divisions just as fast as the industrial capacity of the country and the policy of our government to ship most of our newly made equipment overseas will permit.

It is terribly handicapped in not having enough of these highly technical machines to train troops. But that is not to say that it was wrong in beginning military training of just as many hundreds of thousands of men as it could accommodate just as fast as it could get them.

It is not to say that it is wrong in providing as many traditional infantry and artillery units as it can organize and educate. Germany's great head start was not merely in making modern munitions. It was also a process, years long, but now accomplished, of making soldiers out of millions of young civilians. We were just as fast asleep and are just as far behind in that manufacture as in the manufacture of arms. It is a job of physical hardening and mental realignment.

—O—

Nothing Lost
Even though these boys do not, in their year's training, have a chance to handle these new weapons, not a moment and not a dollar will be lost by giving them this basic training. It is a constantly increasing and nothing lost.

Brig. Gen. C. H. Hodges

In the realignment of the army high command, President Roosevelt designated Brig. Gen. Courtney Hicks Hodges to be chief of infantry. He succeeds Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch, retired.

Nazi Sinkings Have Enormous Effect And Stretch the Meaning of Attack necessary national defense asset.

Finally Mr. Collins is wrong in thinking that we can rely solely on a small group of panzer divisions. They are one necessary weapon for our arsenal, but only one. The Germans have perhaps fourteen panzer divisions and hardly less than 200 other and old-fashioned divisions. Even with all their conquests, the distance and area they have to defend, compared with ours, are small.

No less than they, we must have both kinds of divisions. Our War department is far from perfect, but I know no other government bureau that is now doing its job more intelligently or better. Give it time and a little patience.

Too Many Official Voices

From the Pittsburgh Press

Secretary of State Hull, in denying that the United States plans to attack the French island of Martinique in the Caribbean, says this is German-inspired propaganda to create confusion.

We can understand and sympathize with the secretary in his embarrassment, but as a matter of fact this story about American seizure of French bases in this hemisphere and Africa was not started by the Nazis but by interventionist senators who pose as Roosevelt spokesmen.

This newspaper has long advocated the peaceful acquisition by the United States of all foreign bases in the Caribbean, and has repeatedly warned that delay increases the danger of our involvement in foreign wars.

But whether that peaceful policy is wise or unwise, or whether the military seizure plan is good or bad, the loud and loose statements of policy by alleged Roosevelt spokesmen is becoming an exceedingly serious matter. So serious, indeed, that the secretary of state confuses it with Nazi propaganda.

Obviously there can be no question of the sincerity and patriotism of most of the interventionists who are trying to force the president's hand—that is legitimate propaganda by private citizens. But it is neither legitimate nor patriotic for administration officials and senators to peddle their personal propaganda as presidential spokesmen. If they cannot speak as individuals they should not speak at all—though some would sooner sacrifice their life than their gab. x x x

Would it not be well for Cabinet officers to get on with their own unfinished jobs, and leave the statement of administration foreign policy to the Secretary of State and the President?

Costly Remarks In Congress

From the New York Herald Tribune

Congress's joint committee on Printing has been striving for some time to find a painless method of curbing the expensive predilection of members of both houses for seeing—and letting others see—their remarks in print. The Congressional Record costs $45 a page to print, goes under government frank to more than thirty thousand persons on a free list. In addition to speeches made on the floor, which are usually more or less relevant to

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Of the point laid down by President Roosevelt in his program about the war, there is one that is most immediate, which is likely to become active any time, which indeed may be active already. Mr. Roosevelt laid the ground-work by a statement of fact, appalling fact.

"The blunt truth is this—and I reveal this with the full knowledge of the British government: the present rate of Nazi sinkings of merchant ships is more than three times as high as the capacity of British shipyards to replace them; it is more than twice the combined British and American output of merchant ships today."

This Nazi sinking of merchant ships has enormous and widespread consequences. Quite likely the reader of these words, without knowing it, is feeling some of the consequences today, or soon will. In some American cities there is a threatened shortage of fuel oil, it is being rationed by dealers. The reason for this shortage is scarcity of tankers to bring oil from Texas to the Eastern seaboard. The reason for scarcity of tankers on this route is that the tankers have been turned over to Britain, to take the place of tankers sunk by the Nazis. The sinking of cargo ships, of any nationality, off the coast of England, is felt presently by the citizens of any mid-west American town, five thousand miles away.

Britain Losing

These far-flung eddies of Nazi sinkings that America feels, are a negligible inconvenience compared to the effect on Britain. The effect on Britain is, starkly, that Britain is being strangled. When Mr. Roosevelt said what he did about the rate of Nazi sinkings, he could as well have said that Britain is losing the war.

In this result, a chief factor is that Britain is being prevented from getting supplies which we are making for her, under the Lease-Lend law. The detriment to Britain is not the problems of a legislative body, members may, by unanimous consent, relegate extensions of their remarks to the appendix. Such extensions include speeches, campaign radio and just plain speeches, their own and other people's, newspaper and magazine articles, propaganda handouts and poems contributed by the folk back home.

A courtesy custom makes it practically unheard of for a senator or representative to object to such extensions. Thus uncurbed, members have been growing more loquacious, their remarks more extended. The cost of printing the record of the Seventy-sixth Congress was $1,795,000, almost twice that for the Seventy-fifth. Shocked by that startling figure, the committee has now decreed that members contemplating extensions of their remarks that will run more than two pages must announce the projected cost when asking unanimous consent to insert them. The theory is that members will blush to declare several hundred dollars' worth of their own speeches, and that other members, counting the cost, may occasionally summon courage to object. We trust so, but it seems too gentle a measure to curb the more determined members.

measured by the number of cargo ships which are actually carrying American supplies, and are sunk. Any ship sunk, anywhere between the United States and Britain—indeed anywhere in the world—is a reduction of the total pool of ships, and therefore a reduction of capacity to transfer American goods to Britain.

President Roosevelt says these goods must be delivered. On this he used the most forceful words in his address last week: "The delivery of needed supplies to Britain is imperative. This can be done; it must be done; it will be done."

Methods Being Devised

By what means will it be done? When that question was asked President Roosevelt at a press conference, his answer, quite proper, was that that is a thing Hitler would like to know. In his address last week he said it would be done by "any and all methods or combination of methods, which can or should be utilized." These methods "are being devised by our military and naval technicians."

Of ways to prevent Nazi sinkings or overcome their effect, two are obvious. One is to build more cargo ships. That is being done. Mr. Roosevelt alluded to it in his address, briefly. He and every informed person knows that merely building more cargo ships is not the way to overcome German sinkings. We cannot build enough, soon enough. Besides, everyone recognizes it as futile to build more cargo ships just to be sunk.

The true way to overcome the Nazi sinkings is to attack the sinkers, seek them out, destroy them when found. In this we are already helping, in a guarded way, so as not to too plainly violate neutrality. We have naval vessels and planes in the Atlantic, patrolling. When they see a Nazi submarine or surface raider or bombing plane, they send out warning. The warning is heard by the British, who then pursue the attacker.

Must Do More

But this contribution of ours is not enough—if it were, the sinkings would not be increasing. The German sinkings can hardly be overcome unless we do more. What that more is to be, Mr. Roosevelt quite properly does not reveal. But it can hardly avoid being, or leading to, something that would amount to an act of war as between the United States and Germany. From this quarter is likely to come the first clash. While the clash can hardly be avoided, Hitler may long avoid calling it a clash. He will be reluctant to create among his own people the effect that would be made upon them by knowledge that they were at war with the United States.

There is another quarter in which clash is likely to arise. Mr. Roosevelt says we are arming for defense against attack. Then he enlarges enormously the definition of the word "attack." He says "We must be realistic when we use the word 'attack.'" He says that if the Germans occupy or take control of any spot which "would provide a springboard for actual attack against" the American continent—then we will regard that as an "attack." This, he says, "we shall actively resist." Specifically he mentions points as far distant from us as the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands, and by implication seems to include Dakar in Africa.

This is a wide stretching of the word "attack." Probably it is justified by the conditions of war as carried on by the Nazis.

Whirlaway Takes Rank with Great Horses of World

By EDWIN C. HILL

These are the sun-jeweled days when the thoroughbred horse comes into his own; when in fortunate America and even in undaunted England, the lovely graceful creatures flash around hundreds of race courses. These are the days when Belmont Park over in New York's Long Island, to my mind the most beautiful of them all, is the Mecca for the thousands that love a thoroughbred racer for his courage and grace and high spirit.

The greatest that the world has ever known, I think, was Man o' War, though the few champion, Whirlaway, is not far behind that splendid animal who is in the evening of his life out in the Kentucky blue grass. In fifteen starts, Man o' War was beaten only once and, appropriately enough, by a racer named Upset, for "upset" was Man o' War had been left at the post when the barrier was snapped.

—O—

Another Great Horse

But there was another great horse not far behind Big Red, as the jockeys and the stable boys used to call Man o' War. He was Phar Lap, an Australian animal, who came to his death so mysteriously some nine years ago. It was in March 1932, that Phar Lap—a giant of a horse, some sixteen hands and three inches in height—ran his last race in the Agua Caliente handicap, a mile and a quarter, for a purse of $50,000.

The six-year-old gelding had made a great record "Down Under," winning thirty-seven out of fifty-one starts, and taking third place as a money-winner only to Sea Biscuit and Sun Beau. Sixteen days after the race, Phar Lap was dead. They had taken him up to a farm at Palo Alto, in California, and had turned him loose to graze with a few stablemates. The theory is that he ate poison, sprinkled on the grass and shrubs as a pest-killer. In any event, the great horse was stricken, although no other of the horses grazing with him was affected.

—O—

Plot Suspected

There was talk at that time of a deliberate plot to kill Phar Lap. F. N. Chisholm, investigating for the department of Agriculture, found in some tree leaves on the ranch traces of arsenate of lead, which farmers use for spraying. It was supposed that he had eaten of leaves or grass sprinkled with the deadly stuff.

Phar Lap lives in the record-book of the Turf—and, really, says my good friend Frank M. Stevens, who has seen them all over a long sweep of years, in the Maori tongue, his name meant "Wink of the Skies." Today the great heart of "Wink of the Skies" is preserved in the Institute of Anatomy in Australia's capital at Canberra, a reminder of the beauty and courage of the loveliest four-footed creature the Great Starter of all life ever sent to the post.

—O—

Interesting Offer

Father Bernard R. Hubbard S. J., has made a very interesting offer to Uncle Sam. He has offered Uncle a pack of dogs—big, husky, blue-eyed dogs, that can carry sixty-five pounds on their backs all day long and still wag their tails. The log pack was developed on the Glacier Priest's last expedition. The packs slung across the dog's back and cinched with breast and belly strap. A load of sixty-five pounds—equivalent to a soldier's full pack—can be divided into bags on each side. Father Hubbard has advised the army that pack dogs should be used exclusively in Alaska in places of sledges.

"A dog can swim and climb," he pointed out. "Any place a man can go, a dog will follow. But you're stuck with a sled when the going is rough."

Regarded with Awe

He has a magic way with dogs, even with the fiercest maulmutes, and the Eskimo people regard him with superstitious awe as one possessing real powers of magic. Father Hubbard, as you doubtless know, is often referred to as the "Glacier Priest," or the "Priest of the Volcanoes," because of his many years of dangerous exploration in the Cradle of Storms and in the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes.

For fifteen years this priest-explorer, who teaches geology at the University of Santa Clara, in California, has been adventuring into the Far North. Once he crossed tempestuous Bering Strait in an open boat to prove that the Eskimo people and probably the American Indian came from Asia over Bering Strait a few hundred thousand years ago.

Tough as a whipcord, as brown as one of his Eskimos, there is no adventure Bernard Hubbard won't tackle. He's the same breed of hardy men of God as were Father Joquet and Joliet, who went into the North American wilderness and gave their lives for the Faith back in the seventeenth century. Few men alive have had such adventures as this priest, whose passion for knowledge, for the secrets of Nature, has taken him into the smoking bowels of volcanoes, to age-old glaciers forever creeping to the waiting sea.

RABBIT'S FOOT

There's Nothing in a Name Except an Occasional Black Eye, and Noel Schultz Had an Answer Even for That

By JANE MACK

His mother's name was Nora. She was Irish and a mystic. His father's name was Herman. He was German and a stoic. Before he was born his father had decided that if it were a boy he should be named Fritz. His mother had been equally insistent that his name should be Patrick. However, when the natal day eventually came, which happened to be the day before Christmas, 1905, the Gaelic mysticism of the mother overcame the Teutonic stoicism of the father and the lad was christened Noel. Or perhaps body ever pays any attention to a bartender's second name, he didn't say whether his second name was Schultz or O'Malley. To make a long story short he very soon became known to all and sundry as Pat. Maybe this choice of names indicated that Noel was a psychologist. It happened that the place where he dispensed his drinks was in the shadow of the city hall in the big city. It happened also that many of the customers had a friendly feeling toward a man named Pat, and there was nothing slow about Pat in building a satisfied clientele.

There was logic there also. Pat's salary was $10 a week and commission and it behooved Patrick to see that the gross was a substantial one. He did. Not alone was Pat courteous and pleasant; he was also very suave. Not alone did he believe in the axiom that a successful business should have satisfied customers. His motto was that the customer should be more than satisfied. One must strain every nerve in a case of that kind with so much competition. To be a success one must be a connoisseur. It was that which Pat became—a connoisseur of mixed drinks. Every man has his specialty and Pat had his. Its main ingredient was a shot of gin with various accessories thrown in. The accessories Pat kept to himself, for he was very careful to mix the drinks in a little cubbyhole behind the bar. It was evident that this particular drink had potent powers, for bald-headed men forgot the bareness of their skulls after the second jolt. They relaxed and became valuable. They removed their hats and left them at their elbows or hung them on the rack. They winked slyly at buxom ladies.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Pipe cleaners are useful to clean the perforated discs of the food chopper after it has been used.

A heat stain may be removed from highly polished table by applying the following in their respective order, using a separate clean cloth for each: kerosene, alcohol and sweet or linseed oil. The oil should be rubbed in until the spot no longer shows. Sometimes a cloth moistened with warm camphorated oil will do the trick. If these methods fail, the table will have to be refinished.

THINK OF EVERYTHING
HOW ARE you at thinking of all the various factors which threaten to cause the defeat of your contract? If you think of most of them, but fail to take into account just some one dangerous possibility, that one thing may be the rock upon which your ship is wrecked. On many an occasion, the greatest players protect themselves against not only all the dangers which do exist, but against some which might exist but don't.

When West led the heart J against this contract, Morrie Ellis, top player of the nation in the last championship season, decided to play East for the K, so came up with the A. Next he finessed the club Q and led the club A. West's ruffing of this made it look bad, especially when the spade 4 was returned. The 7 won that, the club 3 was ruffed by the spade 10, West discarding a diamond, and the heart 3 was ruffed by the spade 9. Now came the beautiful play, the heart Q, which East had to cover, ruffed by the spade J. The

Chautauqua Will Open with Band Festival June 15

Series of Programs Will Be Held at Mt. Lake Park This Summer

OAKLAND, Md., May 29.—The Maryland Chautauqua, a series of programs to be presented this summer at the amphitheatre at Mt. Lake Park, will be different each week, according to Rev. Felix G. Robinson, director.

Each week-end the Chautauqua association will present a variety of entertainment that is calculated to prove interesting to all classes of people. In addition to these programs the recreational activity in the Deep Creek Lake and other areas of the county makes this one of the more exciting vacation spots among the mountain resorts in the east.

The Maryland Chautauqua opens Sunday, June 15, with a band and flute festival, at 2:30 p. m. A nominal admission is being charged. The following bands are expected to take part: The American Legion Band, Cumberland, Joseph Fradiska, director; The Tri-Towns band, Miles Haran, director; The Oakland Band, Russell Brown, director; The Accident Band, George Miller, director; and the Mt. Lake-Lock Lynn band, Harry Mickey, director.

A number of flute ensembles will play separately and together at the festival. Oakland senior, Ann Dillard, director; Oakland Junior, Helen Sollars, director; Vindex, Dorothy Harvey, director; Kitzmiller, Joseph Sollars, director; Red House, Grace Flier, director; Mt. Lake Park, Mason Callis, director.

Bloomington, Mrs. Mary Athey, director; Kempston, Velma Siedler, director; Crellin, Mrs. Mabel Sollars, director; Loch Lynn, Mrs. Helen Merat, director; Deer Park, Bryan Shockley, director. The flute ensemble directed by Miles Haran, of Tri-Towns, has also been invited. Bands will be at the amphitheatre at 10 a. m., the flute ensemble at 1 p. m.

Rev. Robinson announced that Walter D. Lanahan, of Laurel, Md., who is responsible for the manufacturing of this type of flute and who also has prepared the textbook, will be present. Over 35,000 children in various parts of the United States are using this flute. It was stated that the Maryland Chautauqua is being sponsored by the Mountain Choir Festival Association which numbers over 300 contributing members, according to Rev. Robinson. Its official organ is "Jubilate," published monthly.

Army Objectors Go To Work in Camp

ELKBRIDGE, Md., June 2 (AP).—Two weeks after they arrived in camp, conscientious objectors at the nation's first "C.O." camp in Palapasco state forest near here began today the work program they have elected to engage in rather than spend a year in the country's armed forces.

Camp Director Dr. Ernest A. Wildman said ten of the young men started this morning on the work program outlined by the state forestry department. Seven objectors began work in the park shop on construction of park benches, and three others were detailed to repair projects on the camp itself.

Six have been working more than a week at the state forest nursery at College Park, commuting daily from the camp by truck.

Dr. Wildman said a second contingent of objectors was scheduled to arrive at camp on June 23. The group will be comprised of approximately twenty-four men, he said, bringing the total to fifty.

Motion Picture Mothers, Inc., Proves Pal Of Proud Mamas of Would-Be Starlets

Tyrone Power and mother

Mrs. Marie Brown and son, Tom

By LEVON E. HORTON
Central Press Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 2.—So you think your little darling is another Shirley Temple?

Or perhaps, Sonny, who does simply divine imitations of Lionel Barrymore and President Roosevelt, is another Mickey Rooney—all he needs is an opportunity to prove it. Well, we hate to disappoint you mama, but the odds are about 5,000 to 1 that you're dead wrong. And we do mean dead wrong. There are about that many mothers who bring their "talented" youngsters to Hollywood every year, and more than 4,000 of them never even get their dramatically-bent offspring onto a movie set.

And you can count on your fingers, with one hand tied behind you, the number of juveniles with a star rating—even though most movie producers would rather disfigure a child star than fling a soft job to a brother-in-law.

You can take the word of Mrs. Marie Brown for this, and Mrs. Brown knows whereof she speaks. She's been through the mill. The mother of Tom Brown, a child star in his day and now a popular leading man, she is the president of Motion Picture Mothers, Inc., an organization made up of the mothers of more than 100 screen stars.

Advice for Mothers
Mrs. Brown has been handing out advice for years, but still mothers pour into Hollywood with all of their worldly goods in a suitcase and all of their dreams centered on a screen career for little Betty or Tommy, certain that their child is the exception to all the rules.

The job of the Motion Picture Mothers is — dealing with such mothers. Back in 1929, Mrs. Brown was having tea one afternoon with Mrs. Ann Whitehead, mother of Anita Louise, and Mrs. Regina Mack, mother of Helen. The conversation strayed into a discussion of the trying times they had had launching their own children on film careers and the problems they had encountered.

"If we had only had someone to advise us," one sighed, and that gave the three of them an idea.

Their children were successes, no longer in need of their attention. They had time on their hands. There were other mothers in Hollywood, too, who might welcome something to do, now that their offspring had arrived. And so Motion Picture Mothers, Inc., was formed to advise and help mothers seeking to launch their children upon a picture career.

Stars' Mothers
Roster of the organization includes Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of Academy award winner, Ginger; Mrs. Ruth Baugh, Robert Taylor; Mrs. Alice Cooper, Gary; Mrs. Ada Durbin, Deanna; Mrs. Mary Briggs, Virginia Bruce; Mrs. Margaret O'Brien, Pat; Mrs. Mildred Turner, Lana; Mrs. Mabel Bigelow, Jackie Cooper; Mrs. Lela Hesselberg, Melvyn Douglas, and many others.

When they hear of a mother who has brought her child to Hollywood, they try to get that child into pictures if it really has movie possibilities. They advise the mother on her course of action, introduce her to the right people, console her when she is confronted with defeat.

If the child obviously lacks talent, and that is usually the case, in spite of mama's convictions, they buy two tickets back home to the disappointed mother and make an effort to see that she is on the train with her child. Recently Motion Picture Mothers, Inc., held a charity dance to raise funds for their work.

Mrs. Brown has ten commandments for the mothers of screen children, ten sensible rules which apply more often than not to the mother of any child prodigy. Here they are:

Don't and Do's
1. Don't force a child into motion pictures to satisfy your own ego or frustrated ambitions. Unless the boy or girl shows definite talent and a strong desire to display that gift in pictures or on the stage, never urge him or her to take up an acting career.

2. Don't insist at all costs that a child appearing in pictures have normal living conditions when away from the studio, such as association with other children, attendance at public schools and plenty of rest and play time.

3. Never allow a child to get the idea that he is different from other children outside the theatrical business.

4. Never squander the earnings of a child player. Save every cent possible with comfort out of the child's salary, in addition to that which is required by law.

5. Keep in close touch with the child's work and do not permit him to get an exalted or erroneous idea of his or her ability.

6. Keep in the background at all times, even when on the set.

Proper Home Life

7. Provide a good, clean, entertaining home life as the child begins to grow up, so that home is more attractive than most other places.

8. Don't build your life on that of your child. Remember that he will leave the home nest in a few years, and you must have other interests to take his place.

9. Don't interfere in his friendships and love interests. He must carve his own life. You must lay a foundation of conduct and ethics and then trust he will follow them.

10. Insist on your child's living well apart from you after marriage. It will make you unhappy and interfere with his adjustments if you are on hand to listen to his troubles.

of the city hall with the entire staff on his heels.

"We can take just so much but you know there's a limit to everything," Burke said.

The reappearance of Rocky Mountain fever, a disease caused by the bite of infected ticks, brings a reminder from Dr. Theodore Shrop, county health officer, of precautions that should be followed by all those whose work or pleasure takes them into tick-infested areas.

"Fortunately," Dr. Shrop said, "not all ticks are infected, but it is better to regard all of them as potential sources of danger and to act accordingly."

"Any ticks found on the body should be removed as soon as possible."

"The American dog tick that fastens itself to horses, dogs and cattle as well as to human beings, is generally responsible for tick-bite fever in this part of the country.

"The disease is contracted through the bite of the infected insects; or by crushing the insects and absorbing the infectious material into the system through a scratch, or open cut, or break in the skin. The disease does not spread from person to person."

Dr. Shrop said that if the insect is deeply imbedded, use small forceps or protect the fingers with a bit of paper or cotton. Swab the place from which the tick was withdrawn with iodine. Dip the fingers and forceps in alcohol afterward, and wash the hands thoroughly with soap and water. A drop of crude oil or motor oil may be of help in withdrawing ticks from dogs or cattle.

The county health officer stressed the cutting of undergrowth and weeds leading to bathing pools and shores in tick-infested areas and suggested that trails around the settlement be sprayed with creosote oil. Debris should be removed or burned.

Five cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever were reported to the Maryland State Department of Health last month. There were two deaths from the disease. Last year an aged man died of the fever in Cumberland.

According to Dr. Shrop, tick-bite fever in its early stages may be confused with influenza, measles, meningitis, typhoid or typhus fever. On that account a doctor should be called promptly if suspicious symptoms develop after a person has been exposed to ticks. Laboratory tests are of value in confirming the diagnosis.

"Petticoat Fever," Final Town Hall Production, Proves a Success

Another successful presentation by the Town Hall Players was given last evening at SS. Peter and Paul's hall, when they closed the current season with "Petticoat Fever."

As usual each did outstanding work from the three leads, Miss Virginia Keefe, Carl Low, and Richard Hoxey, to Mrs. Winnie Moore, who does not make her appearance until late in the play.

Robert Rossmund directed the production. Charles L. Shaw, who left today for the induction center at Baltimore, was stage manager and helped design and build the set.

Others assisting were Bert Ways, electricians; William E. Kight and Miss Virginia Heinz, properties, and Miss Jean Baer, make up.

Roosevelt Accepts

the chief justice did not show the vigor which has heretofore marked his conduct of the affairs of the tribunal.

It is his present intention to remain in Washington during the remainder of the month. Mrs. Hughes has been under medical treatment for some time. If her condition will permit the chief justice and Mrs. Hughes will then go directly to the Canadian rockies, where they spent a part of last summer.

The chief justice has had a career so distinguished and versatile that it has few parallels in American statesmanship.

Governor of New York, secretary of state, presidential candidate, member of the World Arbitration Tribunal, twice justice of the Supreme Court — these have been the milestones along a luminous trail of achievement. He was 79 last April 11 and had been eligible for retirement since 1934.

Known As Child Prodigy

A child prodigy who had read all of Shakespeare before he was eight and prepared for college at the age of 11. Hughes won quick eminence at the New York bar. Before he was forty-five his state had called him to conduct a series of investigations of gas rates, insurance and coal.

The fame growing out of these inquiries swept him to the governorship in 1907. He held that office for two strenuous terms. Then President Taft named him associate justice of the Supreme Court and Hughes retired — he thought forever — from active politics.

On the eve of America's entrance into the World War, however, the Republican party persuaded him to oppose Wilson in a stormy presidential campaign. By a narrow margin he was defeated and returned quietly to the practice of law.

Appointed By Harding

Four years later President Harding selected him to head the first post-war cabinet. As secretary of state, Hughes piloted the Washington Naval Conference, rebuilt America's foreign service and wrestled with war debts and reparations. Then at the end of Harding's first term he left the cabinet to attend to his neglected personal affairs.

Illness forced Chief Justice Taft to resign February 3, 1930, and on the same day President Hoover asked Hughes to fill the vacancy. He accepted and presided over the high court during one of the most turbulent periods of its history.

The tribunal became the center of flaming controversy resulting from its decisions on Roosevelt administration legislation and the president's proposal to appoint new justices for elderly members who did not retire.

The tribunal had delivered a large number of decisions declaring unconstitutional Roosevelt administration legislation. Statutes toppled over included the National Industrial Recovery Act and the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Cries of denunciation came from New Dealers, including President Roosevelt himself. It was contended that a "conservative" court was wrecking the administration's program.

Then the tide turned in favor of the administration, even before the proposal by President Roosevelt on February 5, 1937, to inject "new blood" into the tribunal by adding a new justice for each member who did not retire upon becoming seventy years and six months old.

Soon the tribunal upheld the constitutionality of the National Labor Relations Act and the administration's Social Security law. Thereafter most of the decisions involving the administration were in its favor.

Justices also began to retire and by January 4, 1940, President Roosevelt had appointed five new members — a majority.

Against Reorganization Plan
The chief justice was widely credited with playing a prominent role in defeating the court reorganization plan. His public activity, however, consisted only of writing a letter telling the Senate Judiciary committee that:

"An increase in the number of justices of the Supreme Court, apart from any question of policy, which I do not discuss, would not promote the efficiency of the court."

Hughes was not absent from his duties a single day on account of illness until March 6, 1939. It was announced then that he was suffering from the grippe. He returned to the bench on April 17.

Then on June 3 announcement was made that he was undergoing treatment for a duodenal ulcer — one in the small intestines. He was soon able to leave for his summer vacation and was reported to have recovered quickly. During the 1939-40 term he did not miss a day.

Owner of one of the most celebrated sets of whiskers in the world, Hughes for years has attracted the immediate attention of tourists who flock to the courtroom.

Sought by Hostesses

Practically all of his time has been devoted to the court work except during summer vacations. He and Mrs. Hughes go out, with few exceptions, only on Saturday nights and their date book is filled months in advance. A famous Washington hostess once was reported to have invited them to a dinner a year ahead of time.

He obtains his exercise by a before-breakfast walk when the weather permits.

Ignoring birthdays as much as possible, the chief justice once told a newsmen:

"I'm going along without reference to the calendar."

Some of the best-known opinions written by the chief justice:

Called sit-down strikes "a high-handed proceeding without shadow of legal point."

Bishop Leonard said, in discussing perpetuation of Christian institutions, that "the Methodist church historically has been a defender of Christian education from earliest days to the present time."

Praises Methodist Church

"She has not believed in, but has been confident of the fact that if our liberties in this country are to be perpetuated on the basis of those freedoms granted us by the founders of our country, then it is absolutely imperative that religion and education go hand in hand."

"The great danger of state education is the over-emphasis on the purely intellectual side of life. Hyper-intellectualism leads to a materialistic conception of life or a humanistic conception of life—the latter placing man in the center instead of God."

"I am utterly opposed to that kind of utter freedom given in a democracy that fosters and teaches a philosophy of the social order and of the state. That is the anti-God attitude."

"I am utterly opposed to such groups advocating policies which, if carried into effect, would destroy the very liberties that they enjoy under our flag."

Participating in the conference were General Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and the chief of the Italian general staff; General Ugo Cavallero, so that the new military situation could have been discussed with expert opinion close at hand. It was the tenth meeting of Hitler and Mussolini and the sixth since the war started.

It seemed unlikely that there would be much information concerning the agenda of the meeting. The official German news agency DNB in a guarded dispatch mentioned "the successful and victory-crowned military operations of the Axis powers in the Mediterranean and North Africa" as dominating the outer aspects of the meeting and said the end of operations in Crete was a subject of discussion.

New Move Expected

Although Hitler-Mussolini meetings usually are discussed only in vague terms, recent history shows that they usually are accompanied or followed by decisive action.

It seemed likely to observers here that the entire strategic picture in the Mediterranean, Africa and the Near East was reviewed and decisions for the future made. The press today already was taking the occupation of Crete into calculation as a springboard to Suez or Alexandria.

Crushing Defeat Fails To Break British Morale

Thousands of Allied Soldiers Ready To Continue To Fight Nazis

By EDWARD KENNEDY
CAIRO, Egypt, June 2 (AP)—Thousands of British and Imperial soldiers and their Greek Allies, worn by the strain of thirteen days of fierce but unavailing fighting to hold Crete against the most furious attack yet launched by the Nazi air might are now in Egypt.

Crete is lost, but the British, in spite of a specific campaign by the Germans to prevent debarkation, got away from the beleaguered island in large numbers.

Many Troops Escape
By Saturday night, 10,000 troops, mostly British, Australian and New Zealanders, had reached Egypt safely, bringing with them a number of Greeks and Crete natives and a number of civilians, including some women who preferred the perilous sea voyage to living in a Nazi-occupied country. Others are still arriving.

Others, bombed throughout their entire trip from Crete to Africa, have arrived since then.

The decision to abandon the fight for the island which the British had felt confident of holding, was made last Thursday afternoon as soon as it became apparent that the German air supremacy there would enable them to land as many troops as they desired and at the same time, bar the British from landing needed reinforcements.

Morale Remains High
Some of the empire forces, worn by endless hours under fire, were disappointed over the lack of British air strength, but the military morale, generally, remained high.

All agreed that it was bombs and machine-gun fire by planes that passed over them almost continuously that spelled defeat for the British and victory for the forces of Hitler.

Most of the soldiers expressed utter contempt for German parachute troops, thousands of whom they claimed to have killed, and said they could have fought successfully against even greater numbers if the Germans had not gained such complete mastery of the air.

Those who came from the Candia area said that every parachutist who landed there had been killed.

Candia Troops Surprised
Unaware of the more serious situation at Crete's capital, Candia, and in the Suda Bay area, these troops from Candia were surprised at the order for their withdrawal.

Practically all British troops in the Candia area got away safely, but those near Suda Bay did not fare so well. Many of them escaped, however, by falling back along the coast to Candia and others made their way over the rugged mountains to islands off the west coast.

"Parachutists were nothing," one soldier said, "but dive bombing all day long and continual machine-gun fire was terrible."

Lacked Air Support
"We hardly ever saw any of our own fighters. If we had had a few squadrons of them it would have been different."

An RAF spokesman conceded that the Germans had overwhelming superiority in the air, due mainly to the proximity of Nazi bases and the distance from British bases.

They said, however, that the German air attack on Crete could not be repeated elsewhere in the war area.

Some additional British fighters, veterans of other encounters and picked for the most hazardous jobs, were landed in the last hours before withdrawal, a spokesman said.

One soldier asserted that the British lost comparatively few men in their retreat and sea voyage to Egypt, although they were bombed without letup.

Nazis Use New Tricks
The Germans, soldiers said, employed a number of new tricks in Crete.

"We saw one batch of parachutists come down and we opened fire on them heavily and thought we had killed them," one soldier said, "but when they landed we found they were dummies to attract our attention while real parachutists were coming down nearby. But we went after the real ones and cleaned them up."

"Within five minutes they too might as well have been dummies for all they were worth to Hitler."

Soldiers said that the Nazis don't cry "kamikaze" any more as the German prisoners did in the last war.

They all have learned enough English to "ask for mercy" and they usually pull out their diaries and show entries to indicate they really are not German Nazis but Austrians, returning soldiers said.

Such diaries, they said, seem to be an integral part of a parachutist's equipment.

One Australian said that the planes that dropped the troops were flying very low and added that "believe me they were not jumping, they were being pushed or kicked out by a big bloke in that plane for that purpose."

Land Small Vehicles
The soldiers confirmed reports that the Germans landed howitzers and small vehicles by air.

After climbing mountains to a height of 7,000 feet, some of the troops were so tired upon boarding vessels that they fell sound asleep immediately, completely disregarding dive bombers that were attacking them.

Several of the soldiers insisted that former heavyweight champion

Japan Organizes Youth Into War-Minded Group

Japanese moppets learn the art of war—as part of their play

By JACK BELLINGER
Central Press Correspondent
TOKIO, Japan, May 28—Japan's youngsters are being organized into a military-minded association modeled along the lines of the Hitler Youth group.

Known as the Japan Youth association, the organization includes in its scope of activities 7,000,000 young Japanese. All groups from Boy Scouts to Young Men's associations for older youths recently were amalgamated into the new organization. From now on, there can only be one youth's society—and this is it.

In preparation for a broader program, a series of military training periods will be imposed on about one hundred leaders of the provincial branches of the association for two weeks, beginning June 18.

Half of the youths will train in Tokyo and the other half outside the city. During the period the young men will be given instructions in various military and civilian operations for protecting the country from enemy air raids.

Rudimentary information and training in mechanized warfare will be given to about 300,000 young men selected from all over the country for a week or two from the end of July at leading cities in Japan proper.

Air Training
This will be realized in close cooperation with the Japan Aviation society and the Mechanized National Defense association. The training will cover piloting of light planes, adjustment of engines and the use of parachutes.

All-Japan contests will be staged among young men in shooting and fencing at dates to be later decided.

For 10 days, beginning the earlier part of November, the leaders of the young men's collective service to the state will undergo training on how to gain effective service from young boys and girls.

Guidance will be given to young inventive minds by encouraging their talents in various ways, including exhibits of their inventions to be held in Tokyo next fall.

Instruction for Girls
Arrangements will be made so that youths living in rural districts will be brought to Tokyo, about 100 at a time, to acquaint them with the scientific facilities in the capital.

Itinerant lecture courses on the majority of cases, but remember that any food or drug can produce the condition.

Pitfalls in Study
Certain pitfalls may be encountered in the study of urticaria. These are enumerated as follows:

A certain food may elicit a severe attack at one time but not at another (sensitive or nonsensitive phases).

A food such as fish or dried fish, if fresh, may fail to produce hives—but if not absolutely fresh will cause an attack.

Vegetables and fruits grown in one region may cause hives, whereas the same vegetables and fruits grown in another region may fail to do so.

Certain combinations of foods may be followed regularly by an eruption—whereas these foods individually may be without harmful effect.

The time between ingestion of food and eruption may vary between minutes to hours or days.

Following a single exposure to a sensitizing substance, hives may last varying lengths of time—from a few hours to many weeks. Drug eruptions often last for long periods of time.

Questions and Answers
M. C.—"Three months ago my son had whooping cough, came through fine except that the last two weeks he has had a twitching of his eyes, especially his left. Would this be an effect from the whooping cough?"

Answer—There is no connection that I know of between whooping cough and this condition which is known as "tic," but be sure and try to train him out of it.

Japan's Crime Problem
The big metropolitan centers, Tokyo especially, are finding themselves faced with a growing crime-wave among youths and loose living among boys and girls. Moral standards have been greatly lowered, and the police are trying counter measures.

Through rigid discipline and character building projects of a nationwide youth program officials hope to prevent further spread of crime and gangster tactics among youths of the nation.

As an example of one of the programs to be undertaken this summer, approximately 20,000 students in advanced courses in 244 Young People's schools in Tokyo will be instructed in horseback riding and the care of horses during a three-month training course from June to September, under the guidance of the Municipal Youth's Education Section.

In co-operation with the war ministry, the Riding club, the Equestrian society and other organizations, the Municipal Youth's Education Section will provide this training in the object of rearing future pioneers of the plow—and soldiers.

Persons Subject to Hives Sensitive To Certain Foods, Drugs Says Doctor
TO ORGANIZE WOMEN
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
Urticaria, or hives, is an acute eruption on the skin which breaks out in itchy welts or red patches. A lady of my acquaintance who had a tendency to malapropisms called me up once and told me she was all covered with "whelps." She was a little off because what she meant was that she was covered with wheals.

These wheals or hives are localized areas of dropsy, or exudations of serum into the tissue spaces. Sometimes they may be very serious when they get into the vocal cords, and entirely shut off breath unless treated. A recent review of our latest experiences with the condition emphasizes again that the condition is not local in the skin, but is due to a general systemic poisoning.

Sensitivity to Foods, Drugs
The people who are subject to hives are sensitive to certain things, particularly certain foods and drugs. It is probably not proper to call it allergy. Skin tests which are used for diagnosis of allergy are not reliable in hives as the skin often reacts positively to substances that are negative, and negatively to substances that cause the condition. So many false reactions occur that skin tests in this condition are not reliable. The elimination diets of Rowe—eating certain groups of foods for a while—are more valuable in detecting the cause.

The substances which are most frequently responsible for outbreaks of this kind are as follows:

Foods: Shell fish, fish (including caviar), strawberries, cheese, nuts, eggs, wheat, milk, pork, chocolate.

Drugs: Quinine, ipecac, salicylates, barbiturates, iodides, bromides, phenolphthalein, morphine and other opium derivatives, anti-pyrene.

Youthful Frock with Bolero

Marian Martin

PATTERN 9682

"Teensters—here's the outfit you need to see you smartly through the sunshine months. It's a dress and bolero ensemble designed by Marian Martin and quick-as-a-flash to make from easy Pattern 9682. The dress is very young and jaunty, with a round, simple neckline that's surrounded by a "sunburst" of darts. The bloused bodice lines are held trim at the waist by a set-in belt that makes you grandly lean and smooth. Just two pattern parts from the skirt, which has a youthful, easy flare. Ric-rac edging makes a nice color accent. That well-cut bolero gives a street-costume look and would be smart in contrast, with the revers to match the frock. Altogether, one of the smartest of the new-season crop!

Vast Reclamation Project Is Begun In Western Russia

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet government has begun a campaign to drain and cultivate ten million acres of swampland in Belorussia, the western outpost of the USSR, in the next 15 years.

This is the first official Soviet action under an ambitious 15-year intended plan to outstrip the United States in agricultural and industrial production per capita.

The drainage of the first 4,000-600 acres is scheduled to be completed by 1947. Fifty per cent of the cost is to be borne by the Soviet government, and the rest will come out of the pockets of the Belorussian collective farmers. The average includes the famous Pinsk swamps and other bogs along the Western Dvina, Dnieper, Sozha, Nieman and Pripiet rivers.

WE DELIVER

Discipline Your Children by Using 'Must,' Not 'Ought'

Parents Should Avoid Word "Should" and Have No Argument

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

We often utter ought or should when we know very well that nothing will come of it. Indeed, we don't really expect anything to happen. We have salved our conscience and are satisfied.

I remember having once discovered, on the third offense, that I had told my eldest son, then fifteen, on three successive evenings, when the family were sitting down to dinner, "You ought to have your hair cut." Always then he looked annoyed; I was vexed. As I recall, I said it in a kind of mournful, whining manner. And I said it when the barber shop was closed! Did you ever do anything so foolish?

Your daughter Aimee, ten years old, comes home from Sunday school or a party. "You should change your dress," you say to her. But she does not feel the necessary urge to do so; she is annoyed and so are you. Later you discover that the dress you had hoped she could wear again next Sunday has been soiled. Then you say in melancholy tones, "If you had done as I told you, this would not have happened." But you had not commanded her to change the dress; you merely said,

"You should." There had been no disobedience.

Avoid Argument

If you are sure that Aimee should change her dress, don't tell her that she should. Avoid should as you would profanity; merely tell her to change the dress and see to it that she does. Have no argument. Have available the necessary plan that will make Aimee choose to obey. It might be better to have worked out a plan whereby Aimee would learn the responsibility for putting on her play clothes, without being told to do so, on all such occasions.

In the "Modern Parent" I wrote: When we parents find our children failing to live up to standards which we hold up to them, we are worried. That is when we are tempted to scold, to nag and sermonize.

If, however, we can lead a child to feel that he ought to do as he should do, we have accomplished something. If we tell him to do hard things and make self-sacrifices just for our own satisfaction, we can scarcely count on good results. First he must want to do right and enjoy doing it. We get best results as we shift responsibility from ourselves to our children for the consequences of their own acts.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What do you consider the most important thing for the parent to emphasize in order to prevent eating problems in the child?

A. So to discipline herself as to show no emotions at all over his hesitancy to eat and to let him feed himself as early as he is able to do so, even with his hands. Most babies can feed themselves in part at least, with their bare hands, when only a year old.

Q. Suppose a lot of two or five does not want to say the rhymes and stories you are sure he knows? A. Why ask him to say them? Let him alone. Keep on reading them to him, till he gets so full he will run over.

Ingrid Bergman Stars In Maryland Feature

Robert Montgomery and Ingrid Bergman, fascinating new Swedish actress, are co-started in one of James Hilton's most exciting novels "Rage in Heaven", now appearing at the Maryland theater for an engagement of three days.

Hilton's genius for brilliant characterization, revealed in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon," reaches its peak in the psychological study of a weakling married to a beautiful girl, whose insane and unjustified jealousy of his best friend drives him to attempt the "perfect crime."

Featured in the supporting cast are Lucile Watson, noted New York stage star and screen actress, remembered for her fine performance in "Waterloo Bridge," Oscar Homolka, Philip Merivale and others. The picture was directed by T. S. Van Dyke II, director of the "Thin Man" films, "San Francisco" and other hits. It was produced by Gottfried Reinhardt, son of the famous Max Reinhardt, who gave the screen "Comrade X."

Authentic Music In Strand Feature

Vincente Gomez, the Spanish composer and considered by critics the best guitar player of modern times, will record much of the music for the pictorialization of Blasco Ibanez' novel, "Blood and Sand," the 20th Century-Fox Technicolor production starring Tyrone Power, Rita Hayworth and Linda Darnell, now at the Strand theater.

Director Rouben Mamoulian traced Gomez over half the world before he located him in New York City where he has been living since the Spanish Civil War. Mamoulian, who has been an ardent admirer of Gomez for a long time and owns a rare collection of his works started his search for the composer when he was first assigned to direct the picture.

'Thieves Fall Out' Coming to Liberty

A film that bubbles with romance and laughter will have its local debut tomorrow at the Liberty theater when Warner Brothers' "Thieves Fall Out" opens. The picture stars the sparkling Joan Leslie-Eddie Albert team in a heart-warming tale of young love.

Eddie plays the role of a fellow who has plenty of money within his reach and yet he can't afford to marry his girl friend, played by Joan Leslie. He works for his father, played by Alan Hale, who has plenty of dough but pays Eddie a very limited salary and refuses to give him a raise.

Through the instigation of his sprightly grandmother, portrayed by Academy Award winner Jane

Hustling Cards Regain National League Lead

Redbirds Shatter Nine-Game Streak Of Dodgers, 5 to 4

St. Louis Gains Control Of Game With Three Runs In Fifth

By JUDSON BAILEY

BROOKLYN, June 2 (AP)—The hustling St. Louis Cardinals regained exclusive possession of the National League lead today with a 5 to 4 triumph that ended the Brooklyn Dodgers' nine-game winning streak.

The Redbirds also snapped their own three-game string of losses and accomplished their aim with enough authority to convince a ladies day crowd of 28,361, even though the Dodgers put up a game battle and had what might have been the tying run on base in the ninth.

The Cards gained control of the game with three runs in the fifth inning and after the Dodgers exerted all their energy to tie the count in the eighth, St. Louis showed across the deciding run in the first of the ninth with ease. Johnny Hopp slammed a triple against the fence in right field and raced home after a short fly to left by Jim Brown.

A home run opened the run-making for each team. Joe Medwick of the Dodgers connected for his seventh of the season in the second inning and Frank Greppi crept reattained with a four-master in the fourth. The boxscore:

Speed Against Power

Those searching in the fog for some reason that might give Billy Conn a chance against Joe Louis should turn back to Shelby, Montana.

It was at Shelby nearly twenty years ago that boxer Tom Gibbons started the natives by going fifteen rounds with Jack Dempsey, who was then in his prime.

On the night before the fight the crowd of spectators were pulled on the outcome. There were at least four fight correspondents in the group when the advance verdict was asked. As I recall the intimate details from that "far away and long ago," Dempsey was picked to win by a knockout somewhere between the third and fifth rounds.

Few could see the frailer Gibbons still on his feet at the tenth round. Getting one of the worst of it from a friendly referee, Dempsey was still trying desperately for a knockout as the final round ended with Tom Gibbons still in there throwing punches under Montana skies.

It was discovered later, when Gene Tunney came along, that boxing over the slower mastodons and cracking the skillful boxers were two entirely different propositions.

Medalist Kenneth Fletcher advanced to the semi-finals of the CCC men's spring tournament by defeating B. H. McCowan, default winner over John Marney, two up Fletcher will meet the victor of the Albert Carlson-Charles S. Catherman, St. March.

Conn Will Teach Louis Things He Never Knew

NEW YORK, June 2.—It's a well known fact in the prizefight profession that Willie Conn, of Pittsburgh, next challenger for Joe Louis' title, knows sixty-three tricks with thumb, wrist, elbow, and head that his mother and his Sunday school teacher never taught him.

Willie is a smooth, handsome fighter to watch, but he is also a great disappointment to Mrs. Emily Post. She wrote her book on etiquette for Willie's benefit, and Willie didn't read it.

Conn's two fights with Fred Apostoli, the San Francisco bellhop, were masterpieces of subtle illegality. Apostoli was a good, rough fighter when he had it, but Conn topped every trick that Fredrick produced and, what is more, Willie got away with it. His cheebie kisser, like the face of an angel in repose, beamed out over the multitude in pious ecstasy as he dug his elbow into Mr. Apostoli's solar plexus and wiped a backhand blow over Mr. Apostoli's nose.

Whaled Freddie Wails

The referee, at such times, would be counting the house or warning Mr. Apostoli to keep it clean. You cannot blame Fredrick for bewailing the irony of it all.

"This kid is only supposed to be twenty years old," said the bellhop later, but nobody ever learned all the things he knows in twenty years.

Until this week, your correspondent was ignorant of the fact that Willie Conn's style—including his inside stuff—is modeled on the classics. His boxing form is early Greek, while his inside stuff is early Pittsburgh. His hero is the great Harry Greb, the roughest, fastest fighter in Pittsburgh's history.

This information comes from J. Barrett Miley, the publicist, who is beating a snare drum in the training camp of Mr. Conn. Mr. Miley has a theory about local influence on fighters. We will call it the Miley hypothesis, to distinguish it from the theories of Newton and Archimedes. Newton was an apple man, Archimedes worked with bathtubs. Mr. Miley wants no part of either.

"If you look the field over," says this stately thinker, "you'll find that the young fighters in any given town are liable to model themselves on the town's great fighter. The result is that most of the fighters from that city fight the same way."

Louis Will Learn

"Pittsburgh is a good example. Greb was Pittsburgh's best. Greb was fast, smart, a boxer, and he'd tear you apart in close. He had more tricks than a loaded cigar manufacturer, and all of them hurt."

Look at the Pittsburgh fighters today—Billy Conn, and the Zivke boys. Same kind of style, same kind of approach.

"The fighters from Minneapolis and St. Paul and that neighborhood all look and fight like the Gibbons, Mike and Tommy. Philadelphia kids model themselves on Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Tommy Loughran. Baltimore had a run of guys that tried to fight like Joe Gans. If the town of Manassas, Colo., ever produced another fighter he'd weave and bob and hook to the body like Dempsey."

This theory also applies to the case of Mr. Miley, because all sports writers fight like Miley—the classic windup, the wide sweeping swing, the same thoughtful way of getting up off the floor.

Ball players are all like, too. St. Louis Cardinals once went to bat simultaneously against Mr. Miley, a good target, and hit for an average of .043.

Wherever it was that Willie Conn learned his stuff—and he does have many points in common with Harry Greb—he learned it well. After beating all the middleweights and light heavyweights in sight, Willie began to scratch his initials on heavyweights. He has not been fighting the best class of heavyweights, to be sure. Most of his recent opponents were boys who glanced through the timetable before the battle and always caught the earliest train. But Willie hasn't failed with any of them yet, and they will wind up looking like a handkerchief after a noesed.

Willie is a beautiful blend of manly grace and refined larceny. He may not beat Joe Louis, but you can bet that Joe, older than Willie by a good three years, will learn things he never knew before. A liberal education—that's Willie.

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, making good use of their five hits, whipped the New York Giants 4 to 3 today to take a lead of two games to one in the four-game series.

Eddie Joost followed Harry Craft's single in the fifth with a homer to break the scoreless deadlock. Then after the Giants had got to Elmer Riddle for three runs in the sixth on the strength of Harry Dunning's two-run homer, Ernie Lombardi crashed over the fence in the seventh to knot the count.

Willie is a beautiful blend of manly grace and refined larceny. He may not beat Joe Louis, but you can bet that Joe, older than Willie by a good three years, will learn things he never knew before. A liberal education—that's Willie.

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Players from Navy and Presbyterian college, Clinton S. C., racked up two victories each today as the third district intercollegiate tennis qualifying tournament started.

Examination schedules prevented entrants from Georgetown, Vanderbilt and George Washington from reaching Annapolis. Match-makers said they would attempt to work their matches later into the schedule which runs through Friday.

On the program tomorrow are the first appearances of Navy's Joe Hunt, seeded No. 1, who will take on Fayette White of Presbyterian and Robert Decker of Miami University, seeded No. 2, who will meet Midshipman John Klotter. Also scheduled are two other singles matches and opening doubles play.

A DODGER DUCKS INTO SECOND

Billy Herman, Dodger second baseman, is safe at second in a spectacular play in the Dodger-Giant game at New York. A bad throw from Danning to Jurgens helped Billy make it.

White Sox Mound Ace To Report for Army Induction June 20

By TOM SILER

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—The championship hopes of the Chicago White Sox received a jolt today from Uncle Sam, only one day after they took possession of first place in the American League.

A local draft board announced that John Rigney, ace of the pitching staff, had been ordered to report for induction into the army June 20.

Rigney's record, it not too impressive—three victories and three defeats—but he has pitched in hard luck this season. Only yesterday he set Washington down with three hits, but lost the game, mainly because the White Sox defense crumbled.

Feller Conquers New York Yankees For Eleventh Win

Cleveland Ace's Streak of Scoreless Innings Ends at Thirty

CLEVELAND, June 2. (AP)—Bobby Feller, whose strong right arm was instrumental in keeping the Cleveland Indians on top of the American League for so long, pitched them back into first place today with a 7 to 5 victory over the New York Yankees.

This triumph, coupled with Chicago's loss to Washington, gave the Tribe a game and a half margin in first place over the White Sox, who held the top by one percentage point yesterday.

Feller registered his eleventh victory of the season and his sixth in succession, although his streak of scoreless hurling was completely ruined in the second inning after he had extended it to thirty successive innings by setting the Yankees down in the first. He went on, however, to pitch a seven-hit game, strike out six Yankees and end the Tribe's latest losing streak after four straight defeats.

Southpaw Marius Russo was the victim of all the Indians' scoring, being driven to the showers in the sixth inning when Jeff Heath's tenth home run of the season capped Cleveland's third two-run scoring burst. Tommy Henrich accounted for three Yankee tallies with his sixth and seventh circuit blasts. The boxscore:

It's a Cinch Now; Dumb Dan Picks Conn over Louis

'Style Expert' Says Pittsburgher Will Feint Way to Title

NEW YORK, June 2. (The Special News Service) — Dumb Dan Morgan, our style expert, has come up with his winner of the Billy Conn-Joe Louis fight, and the man is Billy Conn.

"He'll feint his way to the title," Dumb Dan insisted, "and spell it f-e-i-n-t-u." Dumb Dan is in rare form as he is at Mike Jacobs's office, where he is on the 11 to 5 shift as a bench polisher. His shadow boxing was a little curtailed due to a folded newspaper which he waved as a baton, but he managed to get in some good licks at imaginary opponents as he illustrated his points.

Dumb Dan is a rabby gent with a polished noggin and a owlish expression. He's a carryover from another era of boxing, and what he doesn't know about the game can be ignored as of no consequence. Sometimes he picks them right, as the law of averages takes care of that.

"Conn will be on a moonlight excursion—on the move all night," he said, pleased as punch at his apt word juggling. "He'll feint more, hit in the early rounds it will be light, so he can pull away from a counter."

"That's the English style, Parr used it against Louis, and he went the limit and nearly won, and Louis was younger than he is today." "Conn will be feinting on the move, sticking Louis with his left, making him counter feint. You know you get tired quicker missing a man than you do hitting him."

"After awhile, after he has countered these feints and missed, Louis will get arm weary, and then Conn can slug with him. You can slug with any man even Louis, when he's tired."

"Louis never has met a man as fast as Conn. He'll be going around Joe like he was going around a Maypole. A fast man can keep away from Louis. Pastor was fast, but not as fast as Conn. And after Louis had put Pastor down in the first round of their second fight he couldn't catch him again until the eleventh."

"Another reason I like Conn is his confidence. He told me: 'No body living can beat me' and he believes it. He can take a pretty good punch too, although I don't expect Louis to hit him until Joe is so tired his punch will have lost its steam."

"It will be the man-eater against the gazelle," again Dumb Dan's face brightened with the knowledge he had stumbled onto a neat comparison. "The man-eater will just wear himself out trying to catch him."

"Meanwhile Conn will be scoring points with his left, and Louis will be missing when he counters those feints. You know, I always say if you're shooting at a bird and miss, that's one point for the bird. Conn knows more about feinting than any heavyweight in the business. He feints with his feet, his shoulders, his eyes. He'll have Louis crazy countering feints."

"I know Conn gets mad and starts to slug, and Louis is no ham to slug with when he's fresh. But even at that Conn can keep him off balance. Louis has to get set to hit, and Conn won't let him."

"The fast man have given Louis the most trouble, and Conn is the fastest and the smartest of them all. He'll win."

And don't say Dumb Dan didn't tell you.

DETROIT, June 2. (AP)—Big Buck Newsom, no puzzle at all for American League clubs this year, was just as easy for the Boston Red Sox today.

Joe Cronin's boys rapped the luckless Bo-Bo, last year Detroit's top hurler, for six hits and five runs — four of them the result of homers — in the two innings he worked and registered a third straight triumph over the Tigers, 9 to 1. The boxscore:

State's Marriage And Divorce Laws Undergo Changes

All Altar-bound Couples Must Obtain Licenses under New Rule

Several important changes in Maryland's marriage laws became effective this month, according to information made public yesterday in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

As a result of legislation passed by the 1941 legislature and signed by Governor O'Connor, all couples wed in Maryland must first obtain a license from the clerk of the circuit court for the county in which the marriage is to be performed. Formerly, publication of the banns of marriage in the church obviated the necessity of obtaining a license.

Another change prohibits circuit court judges from waiving the provisions of the 48-hour waiting law unless one of the persons involved is a resident of Maryland.

By another new section of the law, ministers performing wedding ceremonies are required to return the certificate of marriage to the clerk of the court within five days, instead of thirty as formerly.

Calling for a fine of not less than ten dollars upon conviction of violating this requirement, the section also provides for enforcement machinery for the first time. The clerk of the court, if no such certificate is returned within thirty days is required to "take such steps as may be necessary to ascertain whether or not a marriage ceremony has been performed, and if so, the name of the minister or other official performing said ceremony," according to the statute.

Ministers performing a marriage ceremony without a license are subject to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500.

The divorce law was also modified by new legislation signed by Governor O'Connor. Under the new law, absolute divorce may now be granted for desertion over a period of eighteen months instead of three years, as previously.

The same law also reduces the residential requirement for divorce actions from two years to one.

Two Cumberland Youths Honored at Mercersburg

Two Cumberland youths received honors yesterday at commencement exercises at Mercersburg Academy. Edwin Watson Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Smith, of the Dingle, received a $100 cash prize for writing the best essay on the "Sermon on the Mount and a gold medal for the best essay on a subject involving "Patriotism and High Civic Ideals." The latter competition was sponsored by the National Society of Colonial Daughters.

George F. Hazelwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Hazelwood, 611 Kent avenue, was awarded a book prize in recognition of his making the greatest progress of any member of the senior class.

Man Fractures Heel In Jump from Truck

William Clair, 59, of 40 Bedford street, suffered a fracture of the left heel yesterday when he jumped from a truck in an effort to save himself from a headlong fall. Clair, an employee of the Hazelwood Construction Company, was riding on the truck when it made a sharp turn into Gay street from Oldtown road.

He was taken to Memorial hospital, where a splint was applied to the fracture.

Industries Are Using More Water

1,117,000 Gallon Daily Increase Credited to Local Plants

Industrial expansion in Cumberland is credited with an increase of 1,117,000 gallons in the daily water consumption of the city. An average of 7,859,000 gallons was used during the week ended Sunday, while last year the daily average for the same week was 6,742,000 gallons according to the report of C. J. Bruce, superintendent of the city water supply.

Lake Gordon is one foot, six inches below the spillway and Lake Koon is nine feet, eleven inches below.

Collections were reported as follows: Tax office $42,434.38, of which $31,502.72 was water rent; weights $82.49; engineer's office fees $662.48; general and privilege licenses $518; movie taxes $921.05; police fines $916, and water department $922.

Police reported 392 arrests and there were 46 fire calls.

The application of Guy E. Williams to install a 550-gallon gasoline tank at 45 Roberts street was referred to the police and fire chiefs and the engineer.

Permission was granted to decorate Baltimore, Centre, and Mechanic streets, and Virginia avenue for the Maryland State Volunteer Firemen's Convention, June 17-20 inclusive.

An ordinance to sewer Kent avenue, Edgevale avenue to Avondale avenue, was approved and 250 copies of the annual financial report were ordered printed.

TO GRADUATE—John Teter, of Ridgeley, W. Va., will be graduated from Randolph-Macon college, Ashland, Va., Monday, June 9, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Teter is a ministerial student, a member of the tribunal of the Washington Literary Society, a member of the Walter Hines Page International Relations Club and is affiliated with the Commons club.

Yost W. King Receives Permit for Building on Virginia Avenue

Workmen will start excavating this morning for the foundation of a one-story 50 by 30 foot brick, steel and concrete structure in the rear of 508 Virginia avenue to house eight bowling alleys, it was announced yesterday by Yost W. King, proprietor of King's Cafe, 601 Virginia avenue, on the opposite side of the street.

King obtained a permit for the construction of the building yesterday from the city engineer.

The new structure will adjoin the building formerly occupied by The Pompon club and the cost of construction is estimated at $6,200.

Dayton Lewis is the contractor and plans were furnished by the South Cumberland Planning Mill. A permit for the construction of a one and a half story house on lots numbers one and two, Kent avenue, yesterday was granted to Joseph A. Spooler, of 220 South Walnut place. The cost is estimated at $3,800. Caleb White is the contractor and George F. Sansbury, local architect, furnished the plans.

Robert A. Wheeler, of 817 Memorial avenue, received a permit for the erection of a garage on a lot in the rear of his home. The cost is fixed at $75.

Police Boys' Club Directors Approve Fistic Show June 26

An amateur boxing show will be staged Thursday, June 26, in the Fort Hill stadium, under the auspices of the Cumberland Police Boys' Club. It was announced last night at a meeting of directors of the organization in the Central Y.M.C.A.

Directors also approved plans for a novice boxing tournament to be held sometime in July, probably in the school stadium. Entries will be restricted to the tri-state area adjacent to Cumberland.

Morgan C. Harris, president of the club, announced that the annual membership campaign will get under way immediately and will be marked by several radio talks. The adult memberships now number two hundred.

Fifteen directors attended last night's meeting.

Those participating in the parade will assemble on three South End streets at 2 p. m., and the line of march will be Laing avenue to Virginia avenue to Maryland avenue, Williams street, Park street, Baltimore street and thence out Greene street where the procession will disband at Lee street.

Thomas F. Conlon, who has marshaled all of Cumberland's outstanding parades since the Armistice Day event of 1919, said that all Maryland fire companies will assemble on South street. The Pennsylvania section will form on Pennsylvania avenue and the West Virginia "smoke eaters" on Race street.

The parade which will climax the week's convention festivities here is scheduled to start at 3 p. m.

Kiwanians Will Mark Birthday Seventeenth Anniversary Dinner Scheduled for June 12

The Cumberland Kiwanis Club will celebrate its seventeenth birthday with a dinner party Thursday, June 12, at 6:30 p. m., at the Cumberland Country Club. It was announced yesterday by William J. Edwards, secretary.

D. Lindsey Sloan, chief judge of the circuit court, will be the principal speaker.

Judge Sloan was the first president of the Kiwanis club when it was organized May 8, 1924. The organization received its charter June 5, 1924 and had sixty-five members at the time. Other officers elected seventeen years ago were J. Thurston Boyd, vice-president; Zebulon Hewitt, treasurer, and Charles D. Clark, secretary.

Merchants Asked To Mark Flag Week Appropriately

Co-operation of all Cumberland merchants in the Flag Week observance here next week is sought in letters mailed yesterday by the mercantile bureau of the chamber of commerce.

Harold W. Smith, secretary of the chamber, said a three-point program was outlined for the merchants, calling for display of the flag outside their establishments, a profuse display of flags on the interior, and use of the national colors as a motif in window decorations.

The Groundhog Comes into His Own, Gets Other Days besides Feb. 2

Season Closed on Hunting of Animal except from July 1 to Sept. 30

The groundhog will have not only one day, but many of them from now on.

His one day formerly was February 2, when he is reputed to emerge from his den and by his actions predict the weather for the weeks to come.

But now the Maryland legislature has given him many days, not days on which to predict the weather, but days on which he will be safe from hunters' guns.

License Required

Legislation which became effective this month regulates hunting of the groundhog, or woodchuck, for the first time, establishing an open season from July 1 to September 30, making it illegal to hunt the animal in Allegheny and Garrett counties except during that period and requiring a license for such hunting.

Farmers are exempted from these regulations, the law providing that nothing in the section shall prevent woodchucks from being dug out of their dens or killed in any manner at any time by landowners or occupants of farms, by members of their family or by their hired help.

During the open season, the daily bag limit will be four and the weekly limit eight, according to law, which also provides that hunters digging woodchucks out of dens in cultivated fields must first obtain specific permission from the owner or occupant of the farm and must replace the earth and level off the area dug out after removing the animal.

Maximum Fine $50

The maximum fine for each offense is set at $50, with an additional fine of $2 for each skin in possession in violation of the law.

Regional Game Warden Joseph A. Minke said last night that the law was destined to meet a two-fold need. In the first place, declared Mr. Minke, by confining woodchuck hunting to the summer months, it prevents illegal killing of other upland game before the season opens by hunters in the woods ostensibly to hunt woodchucks.

In the second place, the game warden said, it gives game wardens authority to act on the complaints of farmers that woodchuck hunters tear up their fields and cause other damage. Thus, he concluded, the legislation is of benefit to both the legitimate sportsman and the farmer.

Bass Season Fifteen Days Longer This Year as Result of New Law

Bass Fishing Begins June 15; Trout Season Also Extended 15 Days

Bass and trout fishermen will have fifteen days longer for the sport this year as a result of new legislation effective this month.

The open season for large and small mouth bass will be from June 15 to November 30 this year. The season formerly was from July 1 to November 30.

The new regulations, which became effective Sunday, set April 15 to July 15 as open season on trout. Superseding the previous regulations, which called for the season to be from April 1 to June 30, the measure in effect adds fifteen days to the season, which opens under the old regulations but which will close under the new.

Four years ago 15,000 local persons were seeking jobs through the Maryland State Employment Service office here. Fred Z. Hetzel, manager, revealed yesterday in comparing the unemployment situation of 1937 with that of the present day.

Hetzel said that in the so-called depression days as many as 500 persons in a single day made application for employment at his office. In fact most of them stated they would be satisfied to land any kind of work.

In stressing the decrease in unemployment over the four-year span, Hetzel produced the figures as of June 1, 1941, to show that 2,805 names are now on the active files, which is quite a contrast to five times that many in 1937.

That the local unemployment service is playing an important part in putting people to work on national defense and other projects, is contained in the fact that since January 1, 1941, a total of 1,318 individuals have been placed in private industry.

In other words, the service has found jobs for an average of 263 persons a month for the first five months of the year. In fact the local office has made more placements than credited as numerous persons sent from here to Baltimore for defense jobs come under the heading of placements made by the Baltimore office.

Life in the city tax collector's office is no bed of roses.

At least that's what Charles F. "Bud" Burke, Jr., assistant collector says, especially when customers come to the office with a chip on their shoulder.

Burke declared that it's a good old American custom to forget to pay your bills and the big blow-up usually occurs when an extra fee is attached to accounts in arrears.

"Some of the infuriated delinquents barge into the city hall threatening to clean out the office when they are requested to pay their bills," Burke remarked.

"Unable to make any headway in their arguments, the customers, who are usually nine-tenths wrong, toss complimentary verbal brickbats at us such as 'political puppets and parasites,' and 'gyps' and what not."

Several months ago Burke said one of the dissatisfied customers sallied into the building with a piece of timber on his shoulder and challenged the office staff. Vile epithets hurled by the garrulous visitor caused blood to boil and in short order the customer won the foot race out.

Marriage License Business Booms

The marriage license business in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson continued brisk last month, the total issued being the third highest figure for May in a decade.

Licenses were granted to 418 couples last month, a check of the records revealed, with this total being topped in May previously only in 1938, when 519 were issued, and 1937, when the figure was 466. Both these figures were chalked up before the 48-hour waiting law took effect.

The May total also showed a marked jump over the same month a year ago, when only 150 licenses were granted, and also over the preceding month, when 350 were issued.
